GROWTH OF ENNISKILLEN.

BOUNDARY EXTENSION URGED.

A meeting of the Fermanagh County Council was held in Enniskillen on Friday, the Rt. Hon. Sir Basil Brooke, Bart., M.P., presiding. Also present—the Earl of Enniskillen; Hon. C. L. Corry, J.P.; Lieut.-Colonel W. H. Barton, D.L.; the Earl of Belmore, D.L.; the Earl of Erne; Mrs. R. O. Hermon, J.P., and Messrs. J. W. H. Johnstone, J. J. Coalter, J.P.; W. F. Dewane, J.P.; Joseph Johnston, A. Wilson, George Elliott, J. M'Loughlin, W. Blake, J. W. Creighton, E. Gallagher, James Leathem, R. C. Phillips, W. Kelly, P. Goodwin.

The Ministry of Home Affairs wrote sanctioning the borrowing of a loan of £2,625 for the purpose of purchasing a plot of ground adjoining the Courthouse for the building of new offices the period of repayment not to exceed ten years and the rate of interest not to exceed that chargeable from time to time on loans issued from the Government Loans Fund.

The Ministry wrote referring to previous correspondence and to the discussion between the Ministry's officials and the representatives of the County Council and Lisnaskea Rural District Council respecting the construction of a bridge between Derrykenib Island and the mainland and stating that the Ministry having carefully considered all the circumstances regretted it was unable to give any financial assistance from the Road Fund towards the cost thereof.

ENNISKILLEN BOUNDARIES.

The Town Clerk of Enniskillen wrote informing the Council that for some time it had been felt that the existing boundary of the urban district was unsatisfactory. The town had outgrown its existent boundary, and a considerable number of properties on the outskirts were enjoying all the urban advantages without being called upon to meet the liabilities falling on the urban ratepayers. So that the further normal expansion of the urban district might not continue to be hampered the Urban Council requested the County Council to make an order, at the earliest date legally possible, in pursuance of the provisions of Section 24 of the Local Government Act (N.I.), 1934, altering the boundary of the urban district in accordance with the statement enclosed.

This statement showed with regard to each of the three wards in the town the lands and properties proposed to be brought in, together with the several boundaries of the areas in which such lands and properties are situate.

The Secretary (Mr. H. J. D. Moffett, J.P.) said this whole matter would require careful consideration, and he would require to consult with the Council's solicitor and with the county surveyor before making any definite report. The Enniskillen Rural District Council would also have to be consulted. If a prima facie case for extension was made out it would then be necessary to hold a local inquiry, the result of which would be submitted to the Ministry of Home Affairs who might, or might not, hold another inquiry.

The Chairman—We cannot take any action until you have further information on the subject.

The Secretary—That is so. It will be necessary for you to appoint a committee to go into the matter.

Mr. Dewane (chairman of the Urban Council) said this whole question had been very carefully considered, and the plans now submitted had been unanimously adopted by the Urban Council who were not anxious to rush the matter, but would prefer that it be studied carefully by both the county and rural district councils. There was no urgency whatever in the matter.

Mr. Coalter—Except the Urban Council emulate Hitler and walk into the rural district. (Laughter.)

COUNTY HOSPITAL FINANCES.

The Finance Committee reported that they had had under consideration the report of a committee appointed by the Council to inquire into and report upon the application of the Fermanagh County Hospital Committee for an increased annual contribution towards the maintenance of the hospital and the liquidation of the present deficit or overdraft, and they recommended that a grant of £836 6s 10d be made to the hospital to clear off the present deficit on the maintenance account, payment to be extended over a period of two years, also that the Council's annual grant of £3,350 (which includes the surgeon's salary) be increased to £3,500.

After some discussion this report was adopted.

COST OF EDUCATION IN COUNTY.

The Secretary reported that he had received the provisional annual estimates of the Fermanagh Regional Education Committee for the financial year 1939-40, which showed an increased demand of £2,670. This would mean an increase in the rates for educational purposes of one shilling in the £, which might be reduced to some extent by a supplemental grant.

The report was referred to a joint committee of members of the Finance Committees of the County Council and Regional Education Committee.

APPEAL BY CONSTABLE.

ALLOWED AT BRADFORD.

An appeal against a conviction for dangerous driving passed by the Stipendiary Magistrate on William Lumb (45), a constable in the Bradford City Police, was allowed with costs by the Recorder—Mr. Frank Beverley.

On his conviction by the magistrate Lumb was fined £6.

It was alleged that his car came into collision with another car in Lilycroft Road and his (Lumb's) car was overturned.

Donald J. Fearns, of Toller Lane, Bradford, said that he was driving the other car with a woman as passenger. Fearns denied that the woman was driving the car and that at the same time she was smoking a cigarette.

Miss Olive Ann Batley, typist, of Duchy Drive, Bradford, said that she was in the car, but denied she was driving it or smoking a cigarette.

Mrs. Gladys Crossland, of Whetley Street, Bradford, one of the witnesses for applicant, said that the car was being driven by a woman who was smoking and it was going at a fast speed. A man was sitting by the woman.

The Recorder, allowing the appeal, said that he did not believe Mr. Fearns was driving the car.

COURT DAY AT CLAUDY.

FINE IMPOSED ON MOTORIST.

Before Captain P. S. Bell, R.M., at Claudy Petty Sessions on Friday, Michael M'Daid, Craig, was prosecuted for driving a motor-car carelessly and for failing to report an accident.

James Logue said on September 9, while on the road near his own home, he saw a car and several men. He was informed that one of his children had been knocked down by a car. Defendant drove witness and the injured boy to hospital in Derry. The boy received two fractures of the leg, and was still in hospital. M'Daid said to him that it would be unnecessary to report the accident as the child would be nothing the worse. The following day, on the witness's suggestion, M'Daid reported the accident at Derry and Claudy.

Witness's six-year-old son said as they were walking along the road the car ran into his brother and knocked him down.

Defendant said as he was motoring towards Derry the child ran out of an opening, and although he did everything possible he could not avoid running into the child. He denied that he had any conversation with Logue regarding reporting the accident.

The R.M. dismissed the careless driving case and in the other case imposed a fine of 20s.

For having no horn on the car on a later date defendant was fined 1s.

Mr. Robb appeared for defendant and Mr. G. Feeny held a watching brief for the child's parents.

David Montgomery, jun., Ling, was fined 1s in each of two summonses for failing to stamp National Health and Unemployment cards of an employe, and was ordered to pay £5 9s 8d arrears in contributions.

STABBED ENGLISH CONSTABLE.

BOY OF 16 ACCUSED.

STORY RELATED IN HOSPITAL.

Lying in a hospital bed with a magistrate's clerk, police officers, and an accused boy surrounding him, a wounded constable told of his encounter with the boy during the night.

A youth of 16 was remanded at a special Juvenile Court at Chatham yesterday charged with attempting to murder P.C. Thomas Reuben Phillips, of the Kent Constabulary, by stabbing him with a dagger.

After hearing formal evidence, the Court adjourned to Rochester Hospital, where with his bed enclosed by screens Phillips gave his evidence.

Phillips said he was keeping observation in an alleyway near Jezreels Road, Gillingham, dressed in civilian clothes about 4-30 a.m., when he saw the boy coming quietly down the alley. In his right hand he held an object a little smaller than a bicycle pump.

Phillips continued—

"I said to him 'stop. I am a police officer. I know you. Your name is ——.'

"I put my hand on his shoulder and said I should detain him. He struggled violently, but I secured him. He broke away and I again closed with him.

"I felt a stinging pain behind my left ear as though something was being jabbed in my skull.

"I tried to hold him and I then felt a sharp jab in my chest. I again attempted to hold him, but at that time I was bleeding very freely. I became faint and I had to let him go.

"He ran back along the alleyway. I shouted for Detective Coe and P.C. Manning, whom I knew were in the vicinity, and I held on to the railings until they arrived."

In answer to the Clerk, Phillips said he could not see if the accused was holding anything during the struggle, and added "It came so suddenly. I never dreamed he would do anything like that."

Detective-Inspector Sharp said that at Gillingham police station yesterday the youth made a statement.

MONAGHAN ASSAULT.

STORY OF SHOVEL ATTACK.

DEFENDANT TO PAY £50 AND COSTS

At Castleblayney Circuit Court on Friday, before Judge Sheehy,

Fras. Connolly, farmer, Rebane, Shantonagh, sued John Donaghy and Jas. Donaghy, son and father, Dooragh, Shantonagh, for £100 damages for assault.

Plaintiff's claim stated that the defendant John Donaghy, on July 22, 1938, while acting as a servant or other agent of Jas. Donaghy, assaulted and beat plaintiff in the course of his employment.

A direction was given as regarded Jas. Donaghy.

Plaintiff stated he had a sand pit on his lands. He sold sand to Jas. Donaghy, and on the date in question John Donaghy (son) came and took away sand with his horse and cart. He spoke to witness about the sand, and then took the shovel and struck witness with it twice while he was in the cart. Witness got the shovel from the defendant and threw it away. Defendant then jumped out of the cart and struck and cut witness again. Witness' wife came on the scene and begged the defendant to go away. The witness said he received medical aid, and was not yet fit to do heavy work. He was struck twice with the shovel, and did not know what was wrong with the man.

The witness said only he caught the shovel the defendant would have struck him on the head with it. He had the shovel in both hands.

Mrs. Connolly, plaintiff's wife, said she saw John Donaghy raise the shovel over his head and strike her husband.

Dr. Eardley, Ballybay, said the plaintiff came to him on July 22, suffering from a dislocation of the right thumb, a cut on the right forearm, and complained of tenderness on the chest. The injuries were consistent with having been caused by a shovel.

John Donaghy (defendant) stated when drawing sand from the plaintiff's place he asked the plaintiff why was he inquiring about the number of loads he was drowing. Plaintiff braced himself up and got hold of the shovel in the cart. They both wrangled, and the plaintiff got the shovel and made to hit witness with it, but hit the cart. He then threw it across the ditch. Plaintiff struck witness and they fell on the ground.

His Lordship said he was satisfied on the evidence that the defendant, John Donaghy, committed an absolutely unprovoked and aggravated assault on the plaintiff. He gave a decree for £50 with expenses for Dr. Eardley.

£5 5s costs was allowed in the case to Jas. Donaghy.

HEAD-CONSTABLE'S MOTOR THRILL

ASTRIDE THE BONNET.

EXCITING CHASE STORY.

THREE BELFASTMEN CHARGED.

A chase after a prisoner who was trying to escape in a motor car was described in the Belfast Custody Court by Head-Constable M'Clelland.

The Head-Constable told how he first jumped on the running board and later got astride the bonnet of the car. He was finally thrown off when the driver accelerated and swerved.

The case was one in which Robert Connor, Bellevue Street, Belfast; Robert Toan, Hartley Street, Belfast, and Isaac Sleator, Tramway Street, Belfast, were charged with breaking and entering the tobacconist shop of Anna E. Graham, Upper Newtownards Road, and stealing 12,850 cigarettes, 34 ounces of tobacco, etc., valued at £27 4s 6d, and also with receiving the articles.

Head-Constable M'Clelland described how on September 16 about 11-45 p.m., he kept the premises of Anna Graham under observation and saw Toan go back and forwards to them in a car.

Later he saw Connor appear over the yard wall of the premises from the inside with a sack which he passed to Toan. Sergeant Harrison and witness with other police rushed to the car. The defendants, Toan and Connor were detained, and Sleator, who was in the car, drove away.

Witness jumped on to the running-board and made every effort to have the car stopped by telling the driver that he was a policeman. Defendant did not do so, but accelerated and drove away in the direction of Dundonald.

After going a short distance witness got astride the bonnet of the car facing the driver. He then caught hold of the top near side door with his right hand and pulled the door, which was ajar, half-way open. Defendant immediately grasped the door on the inside and tried to close it on witness's hand. Witness endeavoured to pull it open again and his hand got crushed and he was compelled to release his grip. Defendant increased speed and swerved the car to the left, and witness was thrown off. The car did not stop, but continued on at a fast speed.

When arrested Connor said, "Nothing to say." Toan said, "I know nothing about it."

Sleator made a statement that he met the two other defendants, who asked him to bring them for a run. He described stopping the car, and Connor putting a bag into it. A number of men then rushed at the car and he drove off.

The three defendants were remanded for a week on bail of £20 and one £20 surety or two £10 sureties.

STABBING OF GIRL.

MAN REMANDED IN CUSTODY.

A drama of jealousy in which a man was alleged to have searched for his sweetheart and then stabbed her several times with a sheath knife was described in Liverpool Police Court yesterday.

Edward Padden (31), unemployed dock labourer, Lamport Street, Liverpool, was remanded in custody until October 14, accused of feloniously wounding Bridget Morgan, aged 25, with intent to murder her.

Mr. E. H. Sidgreaves (prosecuting) said an unaccountable outburst of jealousy appeared to be responsible for Padden's sudden attack on his sweetheart. He said the couple had been courting for two years and during that time they had never had a quarrel. On Tuesday last they spent the evening together at the girl's home, listening to the wireless, and parted on the best of terms.

On Thursday afternoon, Miss Morgan was in a public wash-house in Beamish Street doing some laundry work, when Padden, who had been looking for her, appeared much to her surprise.

She asked him what he was doing there, and he replied, "You have kidded me long enough." He then took from his pocket a sheath knife, with which he made a vicious attack on her. She warded off several blows, but she sustained four stab wounds, and was taken to hospital, where the wounds were stitched.

Padden attempted to make his escape, but was seized by an attendant and was taken to the police station. When seen by Detective Salter he said, "I hope I have killed her." On being cautioned he said, "Ring up the hospital and see if she is dead." When the detective found a sheath knife in the man's overcoat pocket, Padden said, "I bought it out of my dole money for this job."

When charged with the offence, Padden said, "I wish she had died and hadn't got over it."

COOTEHILL URBAN COUNCIL.

At Cootehill Urban Council meeting Mr. C. E. Murphy presided.

The L.G.D. wrote giving sanction to the appointment of Mr. James M'Cabe, S.O.S., as Shops Act inspector.

Mr. Gaffney, B.E., town surveyor, reported that he had examined the waterworks system and could find no leakage of any account. He advised the Council to instal water meters on garages and on premises of persons using water for other than domestic purposes. The caretaker said that since the discussion at last meeting the consumption had dropped by about 7,000 gallons per day.

Mr. Gaffney submitted a scheme of work to be done under relief grant. The expenditure totalled £423, of which £220 is to be spent on unskilled labour.

AUTUMN DOUBLE WAGERING.

SURPRISES AT HAYDOCK PARK.

The most significant news about the autumn double yesterday was the backing of Ramtapa all over the country for the Cambridgeshire, writes "Hotspur," the "Daily Telegraph" Racing correspondent.

Haydock Park had a clear day for the first afternoon of their October meeting yesterday, and the soft going was responsible for some unexpected results.

However, the last two favourites were successful—one of them at odds-on, it is true—and so the bookmakers did not have it all their own way.

A moderate field of milers turned out for the October Handicap, which was considered so open that eight of the ten runners had quotations in the market, with Usk favourite at 5 to 1. The son of Caerleon gave a poor display, never looking in the least likely to justify his support, and finished nearer last than first.

After Harmonic had made the early running the lightly-weighted Bonfire took it up and led into the straight. She, in turn, was overhauled by Halcyon Gift, but Swilcan easily passed the champion's mount at the distance and had little trouble in holding off Dark Folly, to win by three lengths.

TWO MORE FOR PERRYMAN.

R. Perryman, who rode three winners at York on Thursday, brought off a double for Lord Derby with Expunge and Schiaparelli. Expunge was once thought to be better than a plater, but stooped to conquer in the Earlstown Selling Plate, in which he beat the favourite, T. T., rather comfortably, after being in front from half-way. The form is very moderate, and the stable showed no desire to retain Expunge, who was sold to the Middleham trainer, F. Armstrong, for 180 guineas.

It was not unnatural that Schiaparelli should start at good odds on for the Park Plate, as the opposition was very weak, and she had won four of her last five races. Lord Derby's filly took the lead soon after entering the straight, and drew away to win in a canter from Lullibullero.

RICHARDS ENDS LOSING RUN.

Gordon Richards ended a sequence of 20 consecutive losers when he won the Maiden Handicap on General Kid, who was the other successful favourite. He made no mistake about it either, jumping off in front, and never being headed to pass the post with an easy length to spare from Merry Pink.

Sirena was outpaced after three furlongs, and her Edinburgh form, when she beat recent winners in Danseuse and Grand Gift, must have flattered her.

The market on the Newton Nursery indicated that Lord Derby was expected to start the day well by scoring with Colorado Claro, who had not run since winning a seller at Newmarket in June. He ran fairly well, but La Trace filly and Brioche had the race between them from the distance.

WRAGG'S FINE FINISH.

A keen finish resulted in a victory for La Trace filly by a neck, after Brioche had looked like holding on to a slight advantage gained a couple of furlongs from home.

Harry Wragg rode a fine race on the winner.

There was a surprise in store in the Glazebrook Selling Handicap, a 100 to 7 chance, in Maloja resisting the challenge of another outsider, Dennis Grey, in the last 100 yards, to win by three-parts of a length.

Maloja was bought in for 95 guineas. Last time when he won in June it cost 220 guineas to retain him.

CASTLEDERG AFFAIRS.

THE WAGES OF LABOURERS.

At the quarterly meeting of Castlederg Rural Council yesterday, Mr. James S. Crockett, J.P. (chairman), presiding, the County Surveyor reported that applications for increase in wages by labourers employed by the County Council had been received and were being dealt with by the Mechanical Advisory Committee.

Mr. Robert Thompson moved that the Council protest on behalf of the farmers and ratepayers against any increase and stated that the labourers were better off than 60 per cent. of the farmers.

Mr. John Verner seconded the motion, which was passed by a large majority.

Mr. Glasgow, County Surveyor, submitted the draft estimate, the gross amount, £4,258 and the net amount, £3,262. The estimate was adopted.

A complaint by Mr. James F. Gamble, M.P., about the serious flooding in the Drumquin district, was left in the hands of the County Surveyor.

BELFAST BOY IN TROUBLE.

JAILED AT BALLYSHANNON.

Charles Monaghan, Concord Street, Belfast, was charged at Ballyshannon District Court with the larceny of a bicycle, the property of Hugh Gallagher, Pearse Street, Ballyshannon, and it was intimated that there was a second charge of stealing a gold watch, value £4, the property of Mrs. Vaughan, Bundoran.

Inspector Munelly said the boy's people in Belfast had been communicated with. and it appeared that they were not anxious to do anything for the lad. He was, therefore, more or less destitute

In a letter from the boy's father, it was stated that Charles had an accident when very young, and doctors said it had affected his brain. He had started wandering, and they had had to send him to an industrial school until he was 16 years of age.

The accused was sentenced to two months' imprisonment in Sligo Jail, and District Justice O'Hanrahan complimented Sergeant M'Govern on the efficient manner in which he had apprehended the accused.

DRIFTER'S CREW RESCUED.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM DISASTER.

The crew of the drifter Azarael returned to Aberdeen on Friday night, having been picked up from the sea by the Fraserburgh drifter Westhaven.

The Azarael, with her crew of ten, left home for East Anglia on Thursday, and later sprang a leak when ten miles off the Bell Rock. Stormy weather, combined with the strong wind that was blowing, made the crew's plight a desperate one, but they baled for about eight hours before abandoning the drifter and taking to the small boat.

They escaped just in time. A minute or two later the drifter sank. For 2½ hours the small boat drifted before the wind, which by this time had changed and was carrying them out to sea.

They used their blankets tied to a post as a distress signal, and hope rose when they saw two destroyers in the distance. Apparently the destroyers failed to see them, and as the ships passed the fishermen felt that all hope of rescue was gone. They were utterly exhausted and were sitting in the boat knee deep in water.

Eventually however, the Westhaven came on the scene and picked them up, and a few moments after the boat was struck by a heavy sea. Had they remained in the boat they would have been swept to their death.

CASTLEREAGH RAID PRECAUTIONS.

JOINT COUNCILS MEETING.

ADVICE OF MAJOR EASTWOOD.

The question of A.R.P. for outer Belfast arose at the half-yearly meeting of Castlereagh Rural District Council.

The Clerk (Mr. R. G. Jackson) said on September 26 he had an interview with Major F. S. Eastwood, A.R.P. Officer for Belfast, and was informed that, owing to the state of emergency, it would be advisable if the Belfast and Castlereagh Rural District Councils appointed an officer of their own.

Accordingly, Mr. Jackson continued, a joint meeting of the two councils was held on September 29, when he reported to them that, having regard to the recommendation of the Ministry of Home Affairs, which was approved by both councils, that they should co-operate with Belfast Corporation in the matter of A.R.P., he had been in communication with the A.R.P. officer for Belfast and in an interview with him he was informed that the Ministry's recommendation was that the Rural Councils should co-operate with the Corporation, but owing to the emergency which had arisen he (Major Eastwood) was of opinion that it would be necessary to appoint an officer of their own. Major Eastwood undertook to give every assistance in his power to the officer appointed by the district councils. The councils, the report continued, agreed to act jointly in the matter and appoint an officer at a salary of £200 per annum, plus travelling expenses.

THE MINISTRY'S LETTER.

Mr. Jackson explained that that meeting had been held on the day before matters took such a definite turn for the good.

He had received a letter from the Ministry dated October 6 with reference to the matter. It inquired whether the district councils had communicated with the Belfast Corporation on the matter. The terms of the appointment of the A.R.P. officer for the city of Belfast, approved by the Ministry, contained reference to the drawing up of a scheme for the city and such adjoining areas as might be required. The letter continued "Before sanctioning the appointment referred to in your letter the Ministry would be glad to have it made clear that your councils are of opinion that the officer for Belfast would not be able to act for the rural districts in addition."

Councillor George Gray said he was sorry he was not able to be present at the joint meeting and he did not understand the reason for the proposal to appoint a separate officer. In Belfast there had been an attempt made to appoint the Fire Chief as A.R.P. officer, but the Ministry were not satisfied that Mr. Smith could undertake all the work inside the city boundary. The Corporation, however, thought he could. To avoid the difficulty, the Ministry then suggested that there should be an officer appointed to look after Belfast and the surrounding districts, and the Corporation agreed, otherwise, he thought, the Fire Chief would have been appointed for the city.

A Member—There is no reason why we should throw away £200 a year.

Consideration of the report of the Joint Committee was adjourned and the Council decided to negotiate with the Corporation to see if Major Eastwood would now be able to undertake the organisation of a scheme for outer Belfast.

BELFAST FOUNDRY AND A.R.P.

Major F. S. Eastwood, A.R.P. Officer for Belfast, addressed the employes of Messrs. James Mackie & Sons, Albert Foundry, during the luncheon interval to-day.

The employes are volunteering as a firm through their shop managers and are arranging their own protection system.

VICTORIA UNIONISTS.

DEE STREET BRANCH MEETING.

The monthly meeting of Dee Street Branch of Victoria Unionist Association was held in the Unionist Hall, Dee Street, Belfast, Mr. Joseph Morrison, chairman, presiding.

Several new members were introduced, and the evening was spent in a most enjoyable entertainment, consisting of dancing and games, together with a musical programme contributed by Mrs. Beattie, Mr. R. Gray, Mr. A. Allen, Miss Gibson, Mr. T. Clarke, and Mr. J. J. Holness.

During an interlude, Alderman James A. Duff, J.P., who received a hearty welcome, said Mr. Chamberlain had stood up to his responsibility, and by so doing had averted bloodshed in Europe. They in Ulster occupied a detached place in the Empire, which is bound to become, owing to its geographical position, a key centre for the manufacture of aircraft and other munitions of war, by which large numbers of workers would be employed.

Concluding, the Alderman complimented the branch on its virility and enthusiasm on behalf of Unionism.

A vote of thanks to Alderman Duff proposed by Mr. D. Thompson, seconded by Mrs. Ferguson, and supported by others, was passed by acclamation.

Mr. J. J. Holness was Master of Ceremonies, and the music was supplied by Mr. Dick M'Cullough's Band.

He dug up the trees from waste land, dressed them up and attached labels giving them names of well-known rose trees.

MOTOR IN DITCH: MAN KILLED.

SECRET EXPOSED BY X-RAY.

An ingenious thief, William Thomson, who performed a "vanishing" trick with a ring, which was afterwards shown in his stomach by means of an X-ray examination, appeared yesterday in Glasgow Sheriff Court, and was sent to prison for four months.

It was stated that an assistant in a Glasgow jeweller's shop, where the trick was played, said Thomson put his hand to his mouth, and later denied he had taken the ring. Thomson was taken from the shop to the Infirmary, and put under the X-ray. Then he was taken to the police office. The ring was recovered on Thursday.

LISBURN TEACHER TO APPEAL.

DONAGHADEE MOTOR CASE.

MOTHER KILLED IN THE ACCIDENT

At the Donaghadee Petty Sessions, Miss Elizabeth Green, Wallace Street, Lisburn, was fined £5 for driving in a manner dangerous to the public at Portavoe on May 20 last when her mother, a passenger in her car, was killed.

Mr B. J. Fox (instructed by Mr. R. V. Gregson) appeared for the defendant.

District-Inspector Gorman, prosecuting, said defendant was driving towards Bangor with her mother and a friend from England and at Portavoe her car came into contact with a bus and overturned. Defendant's mother was killed and the other occupants of the car were seriously injured and taken to Bangor Hospital.

The bus driver, Robert Gibson, said he was driving a foot from the side of the road when the defendant came round the corner on her wrong side. To avoid her, he swung into a laneway, but the rear of the car struck the bus and proceeding on for a distance overturned.

The conductor, Henry Pollock, corroborated.

John Wright, a chauffeur, who saw the car disappearing round the bend, said it was almost in the centre of the road.

Sergeant Neilly said the bus's right wing was slightly damaged and the car was practically wrecked except for the front portion.

Defendant said she was a schoolteacher and had five years' driving experience without an accident. She and her mother and her friend were just out for a drive and were in no particular hurry. She was going round the bend on her own side when the bus came round on its wrong side; she swung to her own side and managed to get the front of the car clear, but the back portion was struck and the car was knocked on to its side. The bus swerved, but not quickly enough.

Miss Ida D. Sherrington, the passenger, corroborated.

Mr. S C. Clarke, R.M., said he was convinced that the defendant came round the corner in a manner dangerous to the public and he fined her £5 with £1 10s costs.

For the purpose of an appeal bail was fixed at £20 and a surety of £10.

LIFEBOAT ESSAY CONTEST.

SCHOLARS AS WRITERS.

LIST OF THE PRIZEWINNERS.

The Right Hon. J. H. Robb, K.C. (Minister of Education), presented the prizes at the Carlton on Friday to the Northern Ireland winners of the Lifeboat essay competition.

This competition, he said, was a splendid idea from all points of view. It brought before the children the work that was done by the Lifeboat Institution as a whole. Then the essay was an experiment in writing, which was one of the most useful talents anyone could have. The power to express on paper what one had seen was inherent in some people to a lesser degree than others, but in all it was a power that could be cultivated, and to his mind the earlier the better. He congratulated the prize-winners, and said he hoped Northern Ireland children would continue to be as successful as they had been in the past.

The Lifeboat Shield was won by Michael Peel, Upper Ballinderry School. Other prizewinners were:—Maureen Fulton, Finiston P.E.S.; Joan E. Nelson, Brownlee P.E.S., Lisburn; Murtagh Kelly, St. John's Boys P.E.S., Belfast; Robert F. Holmes, Model School, Ballymena; Allan Ardies, Fane Street P.E.S., Belfast; Bella Smyth, Church Place Convent P.E.S., Lurgan; Gertrude Metson, Carrick P.E.S., Lurgan; George M'Cague, Rockvale P.E.S., Newry; Brian Marks, Killinchy P.E.S.; Marie M'Connell, Killowen P.E.S.; Leslie Montgomery, Annalong P.E.S.; Cecil H. Quinn, Letter P.E.S., Fermanagh; Robert W. Porter, Model School, Londonderry; Betty Hamilton, Bond's Glen P.E.S., Londonderry; Samuel M'Garrigle, Clooney P.E.S., Londonderry; Rebecca J. Donaghey, Model School, Coleraine; Patrick O'Friel, Culmore P.E.S., Omagh.

Mr. Murphy, who is a native of Waterford City, was educated at Clongowes Wood College, and later graduated at the National University. He has been attached to the Department of External Affairs since 1920 and assistant secretary since 1923.

TWO YEARS FOR GRADUATE

ARRESTED AFTER WEDDING.

Married only a month ago, John Cuthbert Stanley, a 26-year-old salesman, was yesterday sentenced to two years' hard labour at the East Suffolk Quarter Sessions at Ipswich.

An ex-grammar school boy and technical college graduate, Stanley, who was arrested a few days after his wedding, pleaded guilty to three charges of breaking and entering houses and stealing goods and money to the total value of about £103. He asked for two other charges to be taken into consideration.

Detective-Inspector W. S. Clarke said that prisoner, after leaving the technical college, had had a variety of jobs, including that of secretary to a young men's welfare association.

He had a number of previous convictions for larceny, motoring offences, and housebreaking,, and when found guilty at Croydon of stealing a car was ordered to receive a course of medical treatment in an institute. The institute stated he was not mentally deficient, but a report from the Governor of Brixton Prison described him as "a high-grade mental defective."

Speaking for Stanley, Mr. Robert Ives said that now he was married he had a new sense of responsibility and wanted to go straight.

SHIP STRANDED ON CORAL REEF.

SCOTS CAPTAIN BLAMED.

LOSES CERTIFICATE FOR YEAR.

Forty-year-old Captain John Collins Naismith, of Glasgow, was held by a Board of Trade inquiry in Glasgow on Friday to have been responsible for the stranding of the Bank Line motor ship Laganbank, which stranded on a coral reef in the Indian ocean on January 13, 1938.

Captain Naismith was deprived of his certificate for a period of 12 months as from the date of the stranding.

The court granted him a chief officer's ticket.

Captain Naismith had only been in command of the Laganbank for 4½ months prior to the stranding. It was his first command.

The Laganbank was bound for Rio de Janeiro from Colombo, and she stranded off the Maldive Islands, 40 miles off her course.

The opinion of the court was that the allowance which Captain Naismith made for the set of the tide or current was inadequate. The court declined to accept the master's reckoning, and expressed the view that he was imprudent in acting solely on the speed of the vessel.

He was not justified in attempting to take the 1½ degree channel because he had been unable to fix his position during the voyage owing to mist.

He should have stopped to the south of the island, or stopped the vessel and waited for daylight. He failed to navigate the Laganbank with proper and seamanlike care.

The cause of the stranding in the court's opinion was a north-westerly current for which sufficient allowance had not been made.

The stranding and subsequent total loss were in the court's view caused or contributed by wrongful act or default on the part of the master.

The Laganbank was loaded with a general cargo. All of her crew were saved.

THE DEPTH OF SPACE

IS IT CURVED OR FLAT?

ADDRESS BY SIR JAMES JEANS.

Sir James Jeans, speaking on the depth of space before the Astronomical Society of Edinburgh on Friday, said that it seemed to him that it was still very open to question whether space was finite or infinite, whether it was curved or flat, whether the so-called constants of nature changed in value or stood still—if, indeed, any of these questions had any meaning.

The mind of the laymen reeled at the vision of the depth of space conjured up by Sir James when he described how the universe became more accessible to observation as the power of telescopes increased.

Behind the few stars we could see with our unaided eyes the telescope disclosed a background of faint stars. They made a structure which was shaped like a flat wheel, with the Milky Way forming the rim.

The sun was neither at nor near the centre, but was about one-third of the way along one spoke. All the stars that we could see without a telescope lay inside a sphere having a radius of about 3,000 light years—that was to say, the distance which light travelling at 11,000,000 miles a minute took 3,000 years to cover. Judged by terrestrial standards such a sphere seemed inconceivably great—the light by which we saw its furthest stars started on its journey before the foundation of Rome before the siege of Troy, and only reached us now. Yet this sphere was only one drop in the great ocean of space.

The great wheel of stars had a diameter of something like 200,000 light years. Its furthest stars being probably about 130,000 light years away from us, their light started on its journey through space long before man had become civilised at all. If we compared this wheel to the driving wheel of an express locomotive the sphere of stars we saw with the unaided eye was a drop of steel one-eighth of an inch in diameter.

The total number of stars in the wheel was likely to be greater than a hundred thousand million, and might quite well be double this number.

Of recent years it had become clear that this system of stars is in no way unique. Space was full of rotating wheels of stars. Our own system was only one of many. The other similar systems were the objects we described as "extra-galactic" nebulæ.

DEATH UP AN APPLE TREE.

NEW PLAY IN LONDON.

A world without death. This fantastic idea and its consequences are visualised in "On Borrowed Time," a play adapted by Ian Hay at the Haymarket Theatre, London.

Death, Mr. Brink, in the person of Mr. Philips Holmes, the noted screen actor, walks into granny's bedroom, calls to her, and after allowing her to finish knitting a sock he gently touches her forehead.

He next calls Gramps, an old seaman (Frederick Leister), but Gramps is a little too clever for him. He gets him up a magical apple tree, from the branches of which none can come down without Gramps' permission.

So Mr. Brinks is up an apple tree and Death awaits the old sailor's pleasure. A doctor and a lawyer hear Gramps' story, and naturally suspect him of madness. They call in Mr. Grimes, a mental board officer, to remove him, but Gramps shoots him in the stomach, but, of course, he is unable to die.

Eventually Gramps agrees to let Mr. Brink down, but Pud, a small boy brought up by Gramps, and who, incidentally, cannot bear to be parted from his foster parent, is also a victim of Mr. Brink and, with Gramps, the two march off into eternity.

Supporting roles are played by Gillian Scaife (as granny), Elizabeth Gilbert and Lolo Duncan.

AMERICA'S FUTURE FOREIGN POLICY.

MR. HULL IN ADVANCE OF PUBLIC OPINION IN U.S.

CONFLICT OF VIEWS.

The future of the foreign policy of the United States, in the light of differences of opinion between the White House and a large section of United States opinions, is still uncertain.

The new conception of foreign policy, of which the chief protagonist is Mr. Cordell Hull, Secretary of State, has been evolved on the basis of the Kellogg Pact and in defiance of the Neutrality Act, which has hitherto been the dominant feature of American policy. That Act assumes that there is no right or wrong in wars fought outside America. There are merely belligerents, who must all be treated alike.

Mr. Hull's conception, on the other hand, is based on a clear distinction between right and wrong, international affairs, and the maintenance of international law. In this he is advocating a policy in advance of American public opinion.

MAY BE MODIFIED.

The constant hope of Mr. Hull and his group of advisers was that other Foreign Offices would provide sanction for and put into execution policies which they believed, but which they were prevented from assuming any responsibility for achieving by the domestic political situation.

When this attitude was seen to be leading to the unreasonable assumption that millions of Frenchmen and Englishmen should be killed and maimed in defence of a thesis on behalf of which the United States were unable to lift a little finger, a change of attitude took place. This was facilitated by the fact that in the moment of crisis the direction of American foreign affairs passed from the hands of the department directly into those of the President.

The alternatives now seem to be clear (says the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Washington correspondent). Since the Administration can no longer in good conscience expect others to carry out a policy for which it can itself assume no responsibility, it must either modify it or assume some responsibility for it.

The former appears more probable as an immediate solution. The other, however, remains as a long-range possibility, when it has become far clearer to the public than it is now that, however much Americans may desire to keep out of the European system from which the War of Independence freed them, with the passage of time the European system is creeping back into the Western hemisphere, and already has footholds in Mexico and Brazil.

JOLT TO OPINION.

Europe's crisis has jolted American thought on foreign policy, and forced re-examination of many previously comforting assumptions.

The only guide so far offered by Administration spokesmen is that the inevitability of disarmament must be established as a goal for the future and not the inevitability of war.

The time is not considered yet ripe for a conference, however, and meanwhile America continues to push forward re-armament. But when the strain and tension in other parts of the world has been settled, it is emphasised, the United States will be ready to play their part. The good will of the Administration is behind Europe's efforts to reach peaceful settlements in the remaining problems.

CARTOON THE CAUSE.

DUEL THREATENED IN PARIS.

PARIS, Friday.—A duel is threatened over a cartoon which appeared recently in a French periodical.

Emile Roche, the editor of "La Republique," feeling insulted by a cartoon which appeared in "La Lumiere" some days ago, stated in his paper that as soon as the crisis was over he reserved the right to demand "reparation by arms."

He sent his seconds—M. Pietri, a former Minister, and M. Dominique, a well-known politician—to M. Boris, who was held responsible for the cartoon, and the seconds met those of M. Boris to-day.

There was some dispute, however, as to the extent of the insult, and whether it should be decided by a duel.

M. Leon Blum, the Socialist ex-Premier, was thereupon asked to arbitrate, but he refused, and finally M. de Monzie another politician, agreed to arbitrate. He is now busy deciding whether the dispute is serious enough to warrant a duel.—Central News.

EINSTEIN'S LETTER

TO PEOPLE OF YEAR 6939.

WILL BE BURIED AT WORLD FAIR.

Among records of the present age to be buried in the grounds of the World Fair in New York is a letter in German addressed by Professor Einstein to the people of the year 6939—5,000 years hence, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The records will be placed in a long torpedo-shaped container, made of an alloy which it is believed will endure until the 70th century. It will be buried 50ft. below the ground.

A translation of the letter reads:—

"Our time is rich in inventive minds, the inventions of which could facilitate our lives considerably. We are crossing the seas by power and use power also to relieve humanity from all tiring muscular work.

"We have learned to fly and we are able to send messages and news without any difficulty over the entire world through electric waves.

"However, the production and distribution of commodities is entirely unorganised, so that everybody must live in fear of being eliminated from the economic cycle in this way, suffering for the want of everything.

FEAR AND TERROR.

"Furthermore, people living in different countries kill each other at irregular time intervals, so that, also for this reason, anyone who thinks about the future must live in fear and terror. This is due to the fact that the intelligence and character of the masses are incomparably lower than the intelligence and character of the few who produce something valuable for the community.

"I trust that posterity will read these statements with a feeling of proud and justified superiority."

SUPERMANAGER.

"An hotel manager must have a high standard of courage, the patience of Job, the mental equipment of an analytical chemist, and a more than generous understanding of psychology."—Mr. F. L. Chaplin, of Manchester, at the annual conference of the Hotels and Restaurants' Association of Great Brtiain at Southport yesterday.

LINEN TRADE REVIEW

Improving Prospects And Firm Prices

"Outlook Better Than For Months Past"—Modest, But Steady, Overseas Buying — Expansion Hopes—Raw Material Position After Scare Period—Better Employment Figures—Czech Linen Trade—Chance For Ambitious Youth—Technical Training's Importance.

From a Special Correspondent

THIS was a quiet week in Bedford Street, unmarked by any incident of [illegible]. Linen men relaxed after a jading [illegible] of tension. The market is [illegible] down nicely and many in the [illegible] confident that the linen outlook [illegible] better than for months past.

[illegible] are extremely firm and tending [illegible] in most departments. Spinners [illegible] happier since the recent spurt [illegible] buying, and tow and coarse line changed hands this week at higher [illegible]. Better inquiry has been ex[illegible] in the cloth section, but the market is still rather unsettled. [illegible] due in early September have [illegible] placed.

[illegible] buying of linens is steady [illegible] modest dimensions. Argentina [illegible] continues to make a good [illegible] and the Dominions—notably South Africa, and India—con[illegible] useful orders, which keep [illegible] number of Ulster spindles and [illegible] work.

[illegible] rates are now regaining [illegible] levels, but their recent violent [illegible] proved highly embarrassing [illegible] shippers. A week ago, for [illegible] the war risk rate to New York [illegible] one day by £1 per cent. Those [illegible] buyers, who last week cancelled [illegible] to the United Kingdom due to [illegible] should now fulfil their engagements.

[illegible] house business is at a low ebb [illegible] likely to remain so until American [illegible] awakens. Bleachers, dyers, and [illegible] still complain of poor turnover [illegible] disappointing prices.

Puzzling State of Affairs.

The raw material position is still [illegible] and much depends upon the attitude adopted by the Russian Flax Organisation in regard to new crop. At the moment the Soviet Monopoly refuses to discuss the marketing of 1938 fibre and even seems unwilling to part with the balance of old crop. The scarcity of Ralo tow has forced Ulster spinners to comb inferior tows to enable them to be spun to counts of sufficient fineness. For many fabrics, however, the Ulster weaver does not favour combed yarns, complaining that they do not fill out in the cloth as well as Ralo yarns and that they contain occasional weak threads. Where cleanliness is required, however, the combed product is supreme.

Comparatively little spot material now remains in merchants' hands due to the sales made during the scare period last week. It is certain that spinners cannot purchase raw material in bulk until yarn prices move up considerably or fibre values fall to an equivalent level. The Continental flax markets were disorganised by last week's alarms and have not yet gained normality. On September 28 the Dutch Government prohibited the export of flax and flax straw, but allowed tow to be exported. Ulster spinners took advantage of this concession and 20 tons were shipped to Belfast forthwith. Dutch flax may now be exported again, but a licence is required in the case of each consignment.

A large number of Belgian flax workers were "called up" during the critical days of last week, and this has hindered retting and scutching. Low end Courtrai is now realising around 1,100 francs per bale, and dew-retted from 950 to 1,050 francs per bale. It is interesting to note that many Courtrai scutchers and dealers insisted on cash transactions during crisis week. A few parcels of new crop Irish have changed hands at Ballymena at from 8s 9d to 11s per stone, but quantity is not sufficiently large as yet to enable quality to be assessed.

Some Improvement.

It is heartening that the linen industry unemployment figures released this week by the Northern Ireland Ministry of Labour are 2 per cent. below those for the previous month. They are more favourable than at any time this year since February, though 13.2 per cent. above those for the corresponding period of 1937. The latest returns reveal that, on September 12, there were 20,376 Ulster linen trade operatives unemployed. This total includes 4,772 men and 12,240 women totally unemployed, 901 men and 2,451 women temporarily stopped, and 12 male casual workers. This is a percentage rate of 32.2 as against 34.2 per cent. in August, 58.7 per cent. in July, 38.4 per cent. in June, 36.5 per cent. in May, 33.8 per cent. in April, [illegible] per cent. in March, 29.9 per cent. in February, and 32.3 per cent. in January. It is interesting to compare these figures with the corresponding returns for textile industries in Great Britain. In August (latest figures available) the percentage of unemployed in the cotton industry was 29.1 per cent., while in the woollen trade the percentage rate was [illegible].

Tow wefts 12's 15s 6d per bundle; 14's 13s 6d per bundle; 40's [illegible] per bundle. Line wefts 40's 9s per bundle; 50's 8s per bundle; 80's to [illegible] per bundle; 140's 6s 10½d, and [illegible] 1½d per bundle—all per bundle of [illegible] yards of grey yarn, average [illegible]. Nominal Scottish dry spun [illegible] yarn values:—Tow weft 3lb. 3s [illegible]; 3½lb. 3s 3d per spindle; 4lb. [illegible] per spindle. Tow warp 3½lb. 3s 8d; [illegible] 11d; 5lb 4s 7d. Flax warp 2½lb. [illegible] 4s—all per spindle. Flax [illegible] to 5lb. 1s 3½d per lb.; 2¼ lb. [illegible] 1s 8½d per lb.; 2½lb. flax 3-ply [illegible] per lb. Under the Scottish [illegible] of yarn numbering the yarn [illegible] indicates the weight of a spindle [illegible] of 48 cuts or 14,400 yards.

Czecho-Slovakian Linen.

[illegible] Czecho-Slovakia is now in [illegible] and the moment is opportune to review briefly her linen trade and modern history. Headquarters of the Czecho-Slovakian flax spinning industry [illegible] North-East Bohemia, especially in [illegible] and Eipel, also in Moravia and [illegible]. The main production is in [illegible] quality yarn as Ulster competition in the finer counts has proved too [illegible] in the Czech markets. By 1934, when the last official register was compiled, only 162,614 spindles, distributed in 18 mills, were at work—out of [illegible] spindles inherited 15 years before from the Austrian Monarchy. From 1930 onwards the surviving 18 flax spinning mills in Czecho-Slovakia have worked at only 75 per cent. of their capacity or under. The weavers' story is much the same. Probably not one-third of the looms in Czecho-Slovakia in 1931 were working on linen before the crisis developed. Government subsidies incidentally raised the Czecho-Slovakian flax area from the 1932-1936 average of 26,000 acres to 47,000 acres this year.

During the five months ended May 31 last (latest returns available) Czecho-Slovakia exported 579 tons of grey linen yarn worth £110,649, and 79 tons treated linen yarn worth £19,606. Chief buyer was Germany, with Italy a bad second, and Belgium and Yugo-Slavia lagging in the rear. In the same period Czecho-Slovakia exported eight tons grey flax twist worth £2,599, three tons bleached twist worth £1,337, 107 tons plain unbleached "linen and ramie fabrics" worth £26,369, 659 tons bleached ditto worth £163,674, 222 tons dyed or printed ditto worth £72,702, four tons unbleached "figured" linen fabrics worth £742, 49 tons bleached ditto worth £18,927, 29 tons ditto dyed or printed worth £9,898, 41 tons bleached damask worth £26,068, five tons ditto dyed or printed worth £1,623, one ton embroidery worth £672.

Czecho-Slovakia's main customer for linens is the U.S.A., followed distantly by Austria, Roumania, and Switzerland. It is probable that orders for linen goods placed formerly in Czecho-Slovakia may be diverted largely to Northern Ireland for the reasons stated in past reviews, and which are now too well known to require recapitulation here.

Lithuanian Flax Outlook.

Germany's alleged ambition to control Lithuanian trade has raised linen trade speculations as to its effect, if successful, on flax exports from that country.

Last year Lithuania exported 15,800 tons of flax and tow, of which 54 per cent. were purchased by United Kingdom spinners; 16 per cent. by Czecho-Slovakian spinners, 10 per cent. by Swedish spinners, 9 per cent. by French spinners 4 per cent. by Belgium, and only 3 per cent. by Germany. First group Lithuanian flax sells to-day in the United Kingdom at around £64 per ton, although quality has deteriorated somewhat of late despite State supervision. Ulster spinners are big buyers of Lithuanian machine tows as well as of Lithuanian flax.

Training Linen Men.

There are many important positions in the Irish linen industry to which the ambitious may aspire—and eventually attain—if sufficiently industrious. This thought has been prompted by glancing through the current syllabus of courses available in the textile department of the Belfast Municipal College of Technology. Well-planned evening courses are now provided at the "Tec." both for students apprenticed to the various branches of the linen industry itself and for students engaged in associated trades. In the former section there are courses in flax spinning, linen weaving, and classes for power loom tenters, designers, bleachers, dyers, and finishers, while in the latter section there are classes for warehouse apprentices, and courses in textile engineering intended for those who are engaged in the making of flax, hemp, and jute machinery. The advanced classes cover all sections of the textile industry and prepare students for the examinations of the City and Guilds of London Institute, while evening classes are also provided for students who wish to take the B.Sc. degree of Queen's University in textile industries. Messrs. William Ewart and Son, Ltd., offer prizes annually to students in the textile department, and firms such as Messrs. James Mackie and Sons, Ltd., have schemes for encouraging their apprentices to follow courses of technical study in the ordinary classes of the college.

It is unfortunate that comparatively few Ulster linen trade apprentices avail themselves of the excellent facilities afforded them by the textile department of the "Tec." A technical knowledge of one's work is a sheet anchor in the time of economic storm.

It was learned this week that the Soviet textile industry has organised courses for the training of textile operatives. Ten thousand persons will be admitted to these courses, and a sum of 9,000,000 roubles has been allocated for their payment during the period of training.

Lancashire Cotton Market.

Price movements of raw cotton have been moderate since the large dealings which took place on Wednesday of last week and on the day following. Middling Americans are now around 4.95; F.G.F. Uppers, 6.26; F.G.F. Giza 7, 7.61, and Super Fine C.P. Oomra at 3.79.

Normal trade in yarns was almost at a standstill both during the crisis and after. A certain amount of business, however, has gone through in medium and course American twist and weft, and some business also in Egyptian qualities. Most of the trade appears to have been for the home trade and, as was to be expected, foreign buyers have shown neither interest nor enterprise. It is disappointing that there has so far been no revival from abroad this week, but confidence is obviously very far from being restored.

The aversion of war and the settlement of the European crisis has not given any marked impetus to trade in the cloth market. Prices keep steady and there is a fair inquiry. Orders are unevenly distributed over the market; the only marked improvement is in the South American and Continental demand where normal trade has once again been resumed. As regards the home trade, definite clearances were made in certain styles during the times of stress which, combined with a certain number of Government orders, have helped the position considerably. India is inquiring for light styles and a certain amount of trade has been done though, as is generally the case, indent inquiry lags behind. China is still off the map. Java, the Straits and other small Eastern markets are sending forward their quota of inquiries. On the whole a steady, quiet market, with not much actual improvement in the position.

FIRE AT MATERNITY HOME.

WOMEN AND BABIES ESCAPE.

PARIS, Friday.—A number of mothers and babies had to escape down blazing staircases when fire broke out in a maternity home at Douai, near Lille, to-day.

The blaze spread with such rapidity that it seemed certain that escape would be impossible for those in the home. Staircases and corridors were enveloped in flames, and as they dashed out of the burning building several of the patients received serious burns.

A Pole named Plera, who had gone to the assistance of his wife and six-days-old baby, was about to dash downstairs with them when a doctor snatched the child from its mother's arms and managed to get down with it from a balcony by ladder. The father and mother who escaped by dashing down the flaming staircase, were both seriously injured.—Central News.

'BY THEIR LIGHTS—'

MARKING THE MEASURED MILE.

Ships are likely to run their "measured mile" trials between electric lights. Experiments with this in view have just been successfully carried out off the coast of Northumberland.

Standing northward of Whitley Bay are four steel lattice masts each approximately 100 feet high and erected in 1895.

The two seaward masts are 6,080 feet apart and mark a "measured nautical mile," over which ships run to ascertain their speeds.

The two landward masts are some 2,000 feet inland and are the "line" marks for the seaward masts. Thus the first pair when dead in line, mark the commencement of the measured mile and the second pair the termination.

For many years it has often been extremely difficult for ships' officers to take accurate sights of the masts due to hazy weather and dull grey skies, which make the landward masts almost impossible to distinguish. Trials have, therefore, been considerably impeded and in many cases postponed until more favourable weather conditions prevailed.

This has accordingly resulted in increased costs to the shipowners and shipbuilders, for either trials have had to be run over again, or ships have been compelled to go some 70 miles further north to the measured mile at St. Abbs Head.

Some months ago the custodians of the masts, the North East Coast Institution of Engineers and Shipbuilders, communicated with the North-Eastern Electric Supply Co., Ltd., as to the possibility of illuminating the masts so that they might be easily sighted from ships at sea, stipulating that the masts must be seen in daylight at a range of not less than five miles.

Many difficulties were encountered. Each of the four masts stood on sites at a considerable distance from the Supply Co.'s nearest distributors while no detailed drawings of the masts were available and, therefore, no dimensions could be obtained without first climbing to the top of each mast. The measurements were, however, taken, although under trying circumstances. Hanging on with one hand with half a gale blowing, and endeavouring to manipulate a two foot rule with the other does not tend to produce the most accurate results. When the final brackets were drilled and put in position the results were more satisfactory than anticipated.

Costs were prepared and a scheme submitted by which each mast has been fitted with a double row of 30 m.m. neon tubing 20 feet long burning an intense red, housed in a galvanised metal trough fixed to the head of the mast. These tubes take a current of ¼ ampere at 1,500 volts, and each bank is supplied through a separate transformer also mounted on the posts about 60 feet from the ground. The low tension circuits are brought down the masts to service cupboards mounted at the foot, in which the service cable terminates. The main switch, fuses, service fuses, meter and condensers are also housed in these cupboards.

The distributors to each of the masts are run underground and the total length of cable laid across fields and along the cliff edge is 1,200 yards.

The total cost of the complete installation amounts to approximately £900.

THE HORSE OF DEATH.

Two years ago a Yugo-Slav peasant named Redzepovic, was leading home his horse, with the animal attached to a halter which he had twisted round his wrist. Suddenly the horse took fright, and galloped madly down the rocky road, dragging the man along behind. When the horse was finally stopped, Redzepovic was dead.

The family kept the horse, for it was the only one they had. Daily the eldest son, 11-years old Huzeir Redzepovic, took it to the meadow.

Now he has met his death in the same way as his father. He, too, had the halter looped round his wrist when the horse again bolted, and had his skull smashed against a parapet over which the horse had leapt.

DENTIST LEFT IN A HURRY.

Perplexed by the sudden arrival home of a Philadelphia dentist from an expected prolonged visit to a tribe of savages in Ecuador, his friends were astonished to learn he had left because they had picked a bride for him.

Dr. Harry B. Wright, of Philadelphia, dentist and anthropologist, went to Ecuador primarily to study the jaw formation of the Indians. He lived for six weeks with a tribe in the interior, the chief and medicine men believing him to be the spirit of the chief's dead brother. At the end of the sixth week, Dr. Wright was called to the chief's hut, where he was told he would have to marry a young girl they had picked out for him, if he wished to continue to live with them.

On the pretext that he would have to return to Philadelphia to straighten out his affairs before marrying the girl, he got away from the tribe without any trouble.

In spite of his hurried departure, Dr. Wright managed to bring away with him 14 types of drugs used by the Indians, including medicine for malaria and snake bite. He also brought back some of the deadly poison with which the savages paint their arrow heads and blow gun darts.

U.S. PRIVATE BEATS GENERAL.

"Where did that one go to, Private?"

"I think in a bunker, General."

Private R. W. M'Caskill, of the U.S. Army, is to-day the proudest man in Uncle Sam's fighting services. He walks about with his chest expanded, and it's a wonder his O.D. tunic still fits him.

The reason is that he played the general in the final of the annual Fort M'Pherson Golf Tournament—and beat him.

When General R. O. Van Horn and Private M'Caskill met in the final, the general played his hardest in an effort to beat the ranker, but Private M'Caskill was always on top, and won the match by one hole, to take the championship.

THE FROG IT WAS THAT DIED!

For 39 years Dr. Raymond L. Ditmars has been curator of reptiles at the New York Zoological Park. Nearly all his life he has devoted himself to his charges. He has made long and arduous trips himself to add to the collection, and now for the first time he has let his public down, and all because his palate got the better of him.

Dr. Ditmars was bringing back from Trinidad twelve very fine fat specimens of golden frogs—leptodactylus fallax, to be accurate. And this is how he was tempted from the purely scientific path.

One morning the ship's butcher came and told him one of the frogs had injured its neck. Dr. Ditmars agreed it would be best to kill the frog but suggested it should be cooked and served at his table.

Alas, so delicious was the frog that those at the table who tasted it vied with each other in their praise.

For hours Dr. Ditmars wrestled with his conscience. The frogs, he argued, were a special charge. The frogs, he admitted very sadly, were very tasty.

The gourmet in Dr. Ditmars won the day. That night five more frogs were sacrificed and the diners were treated to "leptodactylus fallax au beurre." The next day the crime was repeated.

So Dr. Ditmars returned to New York minus his frogs—well not exactly minus!

SURPRISE FOR PRINCESS.

SAW MISSING CARAVAN TOWED.

A sentence of six months' imprisonment for the alleged theft of a caravan belonging to Princess Troubetskoy, of "Dick Turpin's Cottage," Iver Heath, imposed by the Slough magistrates on George Percy Strike, a motor trader, of Dessford Way, Ashford (Middlesex), was quashed by the Bucks Quarter Sessions Appeal Committee, to whom he appealed at Aylesbury yesterday.

His Honour Judge Digby Cotes-Preedy said there was not enough evidence to convict Strike.

It was stated that Princess Troubetskoy was looking out of the window of a house in Park Lane, and saw her caravan being towed along behind a car. Inquiries were made at all the places in London where a caravan might be taken, and it was discovered at a repository in St. Martin's Lane.

BLUEBOTTLE—FRIEND.

For sixteen hours he was entombed in the pit—hours of blackness, silence, and solitude. Not even the distant sounds of men making frantic efforts to reach him could be heard, and he began to say his prayers.

One sound alone spoke to him of life and gave him comfort—a bluebottle imprisoned with him buzzed round his head.

John Edward Lumley (34), a married man with three children, who was rescued from the pit at Brandon, near Durham, yesterday gave this account of his vigil.

PETER THE WOLF.

LONDON ZOO "CHARACTER" PASSES

Another London Zoo "character" has passed away. For the last month Peter, the well-known wolf, has been ill, but he was given constant attention, and until a few days ago he seemed to be making progress. Then he suddenly decided that the effort to get well was too great, and on Friday morning he lay down and died, writes "H.M.S." in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

Peter was a common grey wolf, born at the Zoo in 1931. He began his career by being a pet, and both children and grown-ups made a fuss of him and treated him like a dog. But as he began to grow up Peter became less trustworthy, and as a precaution he was no longer regarded as tame—a wise measure for in time he showed that he had inherited his father's bad temper.

One of Peter's claims to distinction was that he was the last link with Lollopy, a famous tame Zoo wolf. Lollopy was a privileged favourite until one day she felt irritable and turned on her keeper, injuring him severely.

She repented, but she was never given another chance. Having retired from her role of Zoo pet, she settled down to a family life with a common wolf called Klondyke, and Peter was one of their sons.

Sir Henry Wood: The Man And His Work

"The People's Musician"—His Courageous Spirit—Trusted And Beloved—Missionary To Man In Street—Friend Of Young Composers—How Ulster Can Help And Share In Jubilee Fund—Concerts To Come.

READERS of these weekly articles will agree that my duty at the present time is to pay tribute to the great work accomplished on behalf of British music by Sir Henry J. Wood, who is this week celebrating the jubilee of his first appearance as a conductor.

The idea of popular concerts was by no means unknown to England before Wood's time. There were, for example, the flashy affairs run by the notorious Jullien, and the more solid work done at the Crystal Palace by August Manns; nor must we forget the much earlier efforts—on a small scale, it is true, but imbued with the same desire of spreading the gospel—of Thomas Britton, "the musical small-coal man" of Handel's day, whose weekly concerts over his shop "attracted even the nobility and gentry of the period." (The attentive reader will have noted the subtle touch of that "even" on the part of the chronicler whom I quote.) But Wood's scheme was a far bigger thing than any that had gone before; and the very idea of nightly concerts over a period of several weeks, to be conducted by a young fellow of twenty-five who had served only a few years' apprenticeship, and above all concerts which were not to be confined to the well-worn classics, but were to strike out boldly on unknown paths—such an idea was either scoffed at or at most pitied by the conservative die-hards of 1895. Wood braved the Jeremiahs; he founded his Queen's Hall Orchestra and his "Proms." in spite of them; and with the indomitable courage of the born missionary he put London on the map of the world's music.

Generous Heart.

As well as missionary to the man in the street, he has been the fairy godfather of many a young composer; and if I were to attempt to enumerate all the dark horses who owed their start in the race to that most kindly and generous of men, with the titles of their first Prom. works, I should have to go far beyond my allotted space. Indeed, it may be said as against Wood the musician—though it only shows up Wood the man all the more lovably—that, as events proved, some of the dark horses were not worthy of his first friendly send-off. Not that I would suggest that Wood has often displayed a poor judgment, but simply that, in border-line cases, his generous nature and his passionate desire to help the men of his day permitted him to give, now and then, the sporting chance that a sterner judgment might have withheld.

Of his honesty, as man and musician, there is no doubt: Henry Wood is as much trusted as he is beloved. Of that transparent honesty I feel impelled to give an illustration. When, some thirteen years ago, he put down a work by an obscure composer for performance at a Prom. concert, that composer sent him a long letter in which gratitude was mingled with some misgiving about the merit of the work and with a fairly broad hint that good-nature might have over-ruled stern critical judgment. The reply came back: "Dear . . ., I have put on your work because I like it.—Yours, very truly, Henry J. Wood." (The present writer happens to be the possessor of that letter, and begs the indulgence of readers for his breaking, for once, his inflexible rule of avoiding personal reminiscence.)

British School's Champion.

In the earlier years Wood became specially known for his performances of Russian music; and in addition to the vogue he created for Tchaikowsky, he did noble service for the younger Russians—Scriabine, Stravinsky and Rachmaninoff in particular. Later on, when England awoke from her long darkness and the young British school of the first years of this century stirred to life, he devoted his best energies to its interests; and it is pretty safe to say that that school (Vaughan Williams, Bax, Frank Bridge, Goossens, Howells, and the rest) would never have won its public but for him. Might not one, indeed, go the length of saying that it was the opportunity of the Proms.—an opportunity hitherto undreamt of in Great Britain—that bestirred it to action?

Of his merits as an interpreter, one has to speak with measured eulogy. Certainly he excels more in the romantic and the programmatic more than in the classics; and, indeed, the wide-embracing catholicity of his repertory and his amazing capacity for hard work (and ever and anon for new work) may have somewhat blunted the finer edge of his artistic discernment. Of his performance of the actual job of conducting, of his fine generalship, of his infinite capacity for taking pains, one can write only in terms of unmeasured admiration; and withal there is a sound musicianship, which—given material congenial to him—has produced many a fine performance. All and in all, a great man, who—younger and more energetic than ever now in his sixty-ninth year—will hold the baton, we hope, for many a year to come; and when he has passed hence, let it be most fittingly recorded of him, as I am sure he would most desire it to be recorded, "He was the people's musician." And, after all, could there be a more honourable epitaph for any of us who are engaged upon the great adventure of music-making?

Characteristic Choice.

Sir Henry Wood's own choice of a jubilee celebration is characteristic of the man—the founding of a fund for the establishment of hospital beds for orchestral musicians disabled by infirmity; and to form the nucleus of that fund the entire proceeds of the Jubilee Concert at Queen's Hall on Wednesday were devoted, all the artists who appeared (Rachmaninoff, who played the solo part of his C minor Concerto, and many British singers who have been associated with Sir Henry's work) giving their services gratuitously. Of the concert itself, of which the second part was broadcast, little need be said. Vaughan Williams's "Serenade to Music," specially written, was very much an occasion piece and obviously designed—more in love than in good judgment, it is to be feared—to give each of sixteen solo singers a tasty titbit. But we must not be coldly critical: in this case the music was not the thing so much as the cause. Ten thousand pounds is the amount aimed at; and we are informed that if subscriptions marked "N. Ireland" (forms thus marked may be obtained from the B.B.C.) total £1,000, that sum will be ear-marked for beds in Belfast. Whether or not the £1,000 ideal be reached, I hope that there will be a generous response from Ulster. I ask everyone who is devoted to music and who is grateful for the work of the man who has done more than any other for British music in his day, to contribute as he or she is able.

M'Cormack's Farewell.

It remains for me to give details of the three concerts in the coming week. On Monday (Ulster Hall) John M'Cormack's farewell concert. He will sing "Minnelied" (old German), "Where e'er you walk" (Handel), "O del mio amato ben" (Donaudy), "The happy lover" (old English), "The poor Irish lad" (arr. from a Handel MS.), "Panis angelicus" (Franck), three Irish songs ("Farewell, my gentle harp," "Star of the County Down," and "The Derry Air"), "The silent hour" (Cadman), "A cradle song" (Harty), and "When I have sung my songs" (Ernest Charles). Joseph Saxby will give piano solos: a Bach "Bourée," transcribed by Saint-Saens; an Air by Purcell; Schumann's "Aufschwung"; a Dance by de Falla, and other pieces.

On Friday (Smyth Hall) the New Hungarian String Quartet will appear at the first meeting of the B.M.S. The Quartets will be Mozart's in G (K. 387), Beethoven's in F, op. 59 (that is, the first of the three written for Rasoumoffsky) and Smetana's in E minor. The last-named, with the title "Aus meinem Leben," is notable not only as one of the rare instances of "programme" in chamber music, but also as a curious attempt at autobiography, written in 1876, when the composer, a Bohemian, was fifty-two. The national flavour of the work has a special interest for us just now; and its peculiar character, alternating between passionate agitation and melancholy, is said to be owing partly to Smetana's thoughts of the 1848 revolution in Bohemia and partly to the affliction of deafness which assailed him in later life. He died, insane, in 1884.

On Saturday (Wellington Hall) the first of the Y.M.C.A.—B.B.C. concerts. The B.B.C. Northern Ireland Orchestra, under Mr. Walton O'Donnell, will play "The Mastersingers" Overture, Brahms's Symphony No. 2 in D, Debussy's "L'après midi d'un faune," and, with Clifford Curzon in the solo part, Liszt's "Fantasy" for piano and orchestra on Schubert's song, "The Wanderer."

BOOKMAKERS V. THE TOTE.

RECORDER OF LIVERPOOL

ON THE PUBLIC'S PREFERENCE.

The Liverpool Recorder (Mr. E. G. Hemmerde, K.C.) allowed with costs an appeal by the Anfield Greyhound and Sports Club, Ltd., against a conviction by the Liverpool Stipendiary who had fined them in £20 and £26 5s costs for not providing convenient accommodation for bookmakers.

The respondent was Daniel Howard, secretary of Liverpool and District Course Bookmakers' Protection Association.

For Howard, Mr. F. E. Pritchard, K.C., alleged that the Anfield Club had deliberately tried to annihilate the bookmakers in favour of their own totalisator. They put them in unsuitable pitches, defined by white lines, away from the end where the totalisator was in operation, and while there were 4,000 people near the totalisator only 20, for instance, came near one bookmaker. "A steward told him he must not raise his voice to do business," continued Mr. Pritchard, "because there was a hospital near by. That, apparently did not affect the Anfield club's own 36 loud-speakers operating round the course in addition to the general hubbub."

James Shand, managing director of the club, said it had never been his policy to defy the Betting and Lotteries Act of 1934.

The Recorder said he thought there was a strong feeling against the bookmakers, but he could not find they had been unfairly treated, or that the allotted space was too small. He thought the general experience was that the totalisator gradually won because people preferred to bet with it.

WEYMOUTH F.C. IN TROUBLE.

Weymouth Football Club, the only professional club in Dorset, are in danger of suspension over a wooden case costing £1 12s 6d.

The case contains the Dorset League Cup, which Weymouth won in 1937, and when they returned the trophy to the County F.A. after holding it for a year the association officials decided that the case was not the original one.

They have informed the club that unless a remittance covering the cost of a new case was received within seven days the club would be suspended forthwith.

Mr. A. E. Reddell, the chairman of the club, said: "I consider the threat nothing short of blackmail."

Mr. A. J. Bilke, the secretary, declares: "We are convinced that the case returned to the association is the right one."

FINAL OF SUMMER LEAGUE.

R.U.C.'S WONDERFUL YEAR.

The R.U.C. have added to their many successes by winning the Summer League. They have had a wonderful year and are to be heartily congratulated on both their teams and individual shoots. Bessbrook are runners-up and are also deserving of the highest praise as they only suffered one defeat in the competition.

The Association Shield and six silver Association Medals are awarded the R.U.C., whilst Bessbrook are the recipients of six bronze Association Medals. Clandeboye and East Belfast "A" occupy third and fourth place respectively and with the others "live to fight another day."

EMPIRE THEATRE.

John D. Robertson's latest revue, "Penny Soc-her Pools," will be the Empire attraction next week, with Sandy Daw as principal comedian. The supporting cast includes Geoffrey Denton, Violet Terry, Gordon Norville, Joe Hudson Jose Lynn, Jack Todd, etc., with a lively chorus. Everything that goes to make an entertaining and "snappy" show is included, and the dressing and scenery are exceptionally good.

NEXT WEEK'S FEATURES SURVEYED.

PROGRAMMES OF MERIT.

RITZ THEATRE.

A capital stage and screen show is announced at the Ritz next week. First feature film will be Edgar Wallace's "The Terror," one of his best thrillers, beginning with a bullion robbery and ending with a mysterious murder. Claire Trevor and Michael Whalen in "Walking Down Broadway" will support. "Stainless Stephen," the wireless comedian, will present his novelty act and will compere the Press gala show on Friday night.

CLASSIC CINEMA.

Walt Disney's "Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs" will be at the Classic Cinema next week. This wonderful achievement provides entertainment of a novel kind for old and young alike. It took three years to make and is said to have cost £250,000. As many as 570 artists worked on it, and an orchestra of 80 musicians was employed. No less than two and a quarter millions of drawings were required, all in colour.

BELFAST HIPPODROME.

The Hippodrome management is retaining "The Goldwyn Follies" for another week. This delightful symposium of mirth, melody and romance is fully up to the standard set by Samuel Goldwyn in previous presentations. The cast includes Adolphe Menjou, The Ritz Brothers, Zorina, Kenny Baker, Helen Jepson, and the comedy sensation, Edgar Bergen and Charlie M'Carthy.

CRUMLIN PICTURE HOUSE.

The early week attraction at the Crumlin Picture House will be "Forty Naughty Girls," a comedy in which James Gleason and Zasu Pitts set out to find a murderer and land themselves in all sorts of amusing blunders. Gleason is the screen's dumbest detective, but Zasu has pathetic faith in him. The week-end brings "Lost Horizon," starring Ronald Colman and Jane Wyatt in a production remarkable for dramatic values.

ROYAL CINEMA.

America's latest racket—Highway High-jacking—is the subject of "Tip-off Girls" at the Royal Cinema next week. Lloyd Nolan is the G-man out to spoil the racket and Mary Carlisle, with whom he falls in love, is secretary to J. Carrol Nash, the racket chief. Roscoe Karns is assistant to Nolan. William Boyd in "Heart of Arizona," the latest Hopalong Cassidy adventure, will be second feature.

CURZON CINEMA.

Frank Morgan as a charming scamp who prefers living on his wits to working, has a tailor-made role in "Beg, Borrow or Steal," at the Curzon on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday. In support will be the dramatic film "Woman Against the World," featuring Ralph Forbes and Alice Moore. The week-end attractions will be "I'll Take Romance," a musical film starring Grace Moore, and "The Game That Kills" (Charles Quigley and Rita Hayward).

THE BELFAST PLAYHOUSE.

"ROOKERY NOOK" NEXT WEEK.

After the strain of the recent European crisis a pleasing change and a wholesome relief will be offered at the Playhouse next week in the famous Aldwych Theatre comedy, "Rookery Nook." It has never been played in Bedford Street, and therefore will be new to Playhouse audiences. It is a remarkably funny farce and ran for two years at the famous London theatre, with Tom Walls, Ralph Lynn, Robertson Hare, and Mary Brough in the leading parts. The Playhouse company is always at its best in light fare, and can always be relied upon to give a remarkably good performance.

The cast will be headed by Mr. Norway himself, who, as a comedian, takes high rank. His easy-going debonair touch-and-go manner is exactly suited to the requirements of the comedy. He will be supported by Percy Beresford, John A. Lewis, Edward Byrne, Kenneth Thomas, and Moira Hayes, Murial North among others, and Maudie Whitehead will sustain the role created by Mary Brough. Miss Whitehead is an accomplished comedienne with a long record of comedy successes, and she is sure to prove a tower of strength to the production.

EXCITING CONTESTS AT STADIUM.

"EARLY TO BED" SCENES

ULSTER CHAMPION SCORES.

ARMOUR VANQUISHES M'CREADY.

What the crowd at the Belfast Sports Stadium, Cuba Street, on Friday evening may have missed in the way of long-drawn-out struggles for supremacy, they were compensated for by having served up one of those "early-to-bed" programmes which occasionally come as a shock to the keenest matchmaker, while providing an abundance of thrills for spectators.

Before a hail of leather a bill of five contests, scheduled to cover fifty rounds, "melted" in nineteen sessions, the casualties being one knockout, two enforced retirements, and two stoppages by the referee, Mr. Wm. Gilmore.

The fistic storm started in the opening bout (writes "The Timekeeper"). Pat Kelly (Belfast), 10st. 2lb., knocking out Jack Robinson (Bolton), 9st. 6lb. in the sixth heat.

Next in the ring, Spike Robinson (Belfast), 9st. 5½lb., came off second best in a head collision with Boyo Burns (Bolton), 9st. 12½lb., and the referee stopped the bout within ten seconds of its commencement, the local having sustained a left eye injury.

Then Al Lyttle (Belfast), Ulster lightweight champion, was deprived of a knock-out victory against Tommy Rose (Bolton), the latter's seconds clambering into the ring to stop the fight in the third round, when their man, badly battered, was practically "out" on his feet.

TOMMY ROSE WELL NAMED.

Rose shaped promisingly in the opening heat, steadying Lyttle with a two-fisted barrage when the local sought to make the pace hot. In the second round Rose sampled Lyttle's full artillery, and thereafter it was only a question of how long a plucky visitor could stick the punishment meted out.

Thrice he was down for long counts, struggling to his feet each time to beat the toll, and striving gamely to fight back, only to be floored again. He was down a fourth time, the bell ending the round as the count reached "three."

The third session looked to be a repetition of the previous one, Rose, dazed and reeling under a shower of punches, being floored for a count of five. He rose to continue, but his seconds intervened. Lyttle was an impressive winner, but Rose (well-named!) took the real "curtain" as the gamest of losers.

In the succeeding contest Gerry M'Cready (Lurgan) set out to silence Tommy Armour (Belfast) with a wicked right-hander, but soon found that the local carried two milling weapons, which looked like twenty-two when Tommy got them really under way!

A THRILLING ENCOUNTER.

Neither man offered quarter, and in the two and a half rounds covered by the rivals spectators got all the thrills the most exacting could desire. Time and again in the first two rounds Armour was staggered by M'Cready's swinging right, but Tommy took these shocks as a spirited racehorse takes its jockey's spurs—a goad to the winning post—and the Lurgan lad paid dearly for the "liberties" attempted against a rising k.o. specialist.

In the third session Armour landed a couple of haymakers, and M'Cready dropped heavily for a count of seven, and on rising was again floored. Dazed but game, he staggered to his feet only to be battered down for "four." Shortly afterwards he fell again, and just beat the long toll, but at this stage the referee decided to intervene, giving the well-earned laurels to Armour.

Billy Jackson (Belfast) defeated Jim Hughes (Belfast), the latter's second tossing in a towel in the sixth round, by which stage Hughes, who suffered an eye injury in the opening heat, had become mainly receiver-general.

Hughes in every round did his best to sink Jackson, but the latter could take all that was coming, and still serve out hotter medicine.

TO-NIGHT AT THE ULSTER HALL.

An attractive boxing tournament is planned by Mrs. Copley for the Ulster Hall this evening, and, as was the case for her show on Wednesday evening, the organiser should draw a crowded "house," the admission prices being 6d and 1s 3d, so that the earliest in the queue will be the first in the seats.

Over ten rounds Freddy Warnock opposes Boyo Davis (Lancaster) and Jim Keery (Lisburn) tackles Alex. Parkin (Blackburn), while eight-rounders are—Tommy Wilson (Lisburn) v. Young M'Aloran (Belfast) and Al Summers v. Jim Gordon, both locals, the four-spot bout matching Jim M'Quade (Lurgan) against Johnny Thomas (Belfast).

FOORD RETURNS TO S. AFRICA.

Ben Foord, the former British heavyweight champion, now retired from the ring, left London to-day en route for South Africa, his native country, where he has decided to settle down.

Foord, who sailed from Southampton, was accompanied by his young wife, and according to Mr. Louis Walsh, who brought him to England and made him champion, Foord hopes to start a boot factory.

"I had a long chat on the telephone with Ben on Friday night," Mr. Walsh told a reporter at Malvern to-day, "and I wished him luck in his new venture. He is very keen on the boot factory idea, because he feels there is room for development in that industry in South Africa."

FLYWEIGHT TITLE RIVALS.

Paddy Ryan (Manchester) and Tut Whalley (Hanley) are to fight at Belle Vue, Manchester, in the final eliminating contest for the flyweight championship of Great Britain.

Belle Vue's purse offer has been approved by the British Boxing Board of Control, it is stated to-day, and other details including the date are to be arranged.

AIRCRAFT FACTORY BUSES.

ENGINEERING BODY'S ACTION.

At a meeting of the Belfast District Committee of the Shipbuilding and Engineering Confederation, Mr. Tom M'Nally, presiding, the secretary, Mr. H. Speirs, reported that the question of transport facilities to the aircraft factory had been taken up with the manager of the Corporation Transport Department, wh. had replied that all available buses were being sent down to the factory.

Mr. Robert Kennedy feared that in the nightly rush for the few buses men might be injured.

Mr. James Johnston expressed the opinion that buses would not solve the traffic problem. Buses could not take the crowds away from a large public works or a football match satisfactorily. A tramcar, however, could be packed without any danger.

On the motion of Mr. Wm. Gray, seconded by Mr. Herbert Trotter, it was decided that the secretary should again take the matter up with the transport manager.

BELFAST PHILHARMONIC SOCIETY.

As will be seen in our advertising columns, tenors are required for society's chorus. An effort is being made to bring this section up to 50 voices, and so balance the strength in other parts. It has been brought to the notice of the committee that in the past some singers have hesitated to join the city's long-established "parent" society on account of weakness in sight-reading. We are assured, however, that the main requirement is a voice of good quality, and the conductor will be only too glad to assist personally and gratuitously any member requiring a helping hand in reading. The Philharmonic Society provides exceptional opportunities for the study of choral works, and the famous soloists engaged are an education in themselves. Out of the 150 or more known tenors in Belfast and district it is hoped that many will at once communicate with the Philharmonic office or conductor. The subscription and cost of music are now within reach of all.

FOOTBALL SCENES.

96,000 AT AUSTRALIAN MATCH.

200 FAINTING CASES.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.—Scenes reminiscent of the first Wembley Cup final were witnessed when a record crowd of 96,834 people crowded into Melbourne Cricket Ground, to see Carlton beat Collingwood in the Australian rules football final.

Thousands of people, unable to enter the ground when the gates were closed, crowded against the fence near the open stand, and the strain became so great that the barrier gave way, enabling hundreds to invade the ground.

The score board, upon which many had climbed, collapsed, causing minor injuries.

SCOTS INVASION.

FOR THE WINDSOR 'NATIONAL.

OVER 4,000 ARRIVE TO-DAY.

TARTANS AND SAUCEPANS.

Belfast had its biggest invasion of Scottish football fans this morning, when three Burns-Laird steamers landed over 4,000 at the Donegall Quay.

The advance guard arrived with the Scottish team on Friday, and they were down in full force at the quay this morning to meet their brethren.

When the citizens who go to work early arrived in the centre of the city, they found it swarming with the visitors.

There were all sorts and conditions of Scots—tall, short, stout, and thin—and it was a real gathering of the clans, judging by the multi-coloured tartans displayed.

The only thing that was missing was the skirl of the bagpipes, but this proved a handicap easily removed. As soon as the stores opened the Scots invaded and soon appeared in the streets armed with all sorts of weird musical instruments. There were heavy tin saucepans, which were used as cymbals, and if the tone of their clashing was not all that could be desired, the vigour certainly made up for it.

There were one-man bands, quartets, sextets, octets, and all the other "-tets" and the city youngsters found plenty of amusement in following the "tartan-tammied brigade."

Later in the morning the majority went on sight-seeing tours. Some visited places of industry, the "Telegraph" Office included, others enjoyed tram rides to the boundaries, and some were to be seen on jaunting cars and in taxis, while the City Hall attracted many more.

Towards mid-day all the centre-city restaurants were working at full pressure.

From one o'clock onwards the big trek to Windsor began. Cars ran at minute intervals from Castle Junction, and Scots and country visitors were prominent on practically every car. Fortunately the rain, which had threatened earlier, had held off.

In connection with the Football International there was an addition to the service from Stranraer this morning, a special steamer arriving at Larne Harbour at 5-50. The mail and passenger steamers arrived about 8-30. Each carried about 1,200 passengers, and two trains awaited each steamer to convey the passengers to Belfast.

CONSOLATION RACE AT CELTIC PARK.

CAHERCON LAD'S FAST TIME

EXCITING RACE IN FIRST HEAT.

Cahercon Lad, one of the most consistent dogs in this season's racing, showed fast time at Celtic last night on a track which had been cut up in the earlier part of the meeting when clocking 30.72secs. in the Consolation Stakes of the Gold Cup.

Fast out and running strongly to the turn, the Lisburn dog was well clear of his field in the back straight and easily resisted the late challenge of Master Lemon to score by three lengths.

Only three turned out for the first heat of the Consolation Stakes, Lucky Heather being made favourite at 11 to 10 on.

It was a close race between the three to the top bend, with Streamline Cutlet always showing a yard or so in front. The favourite was challenging strongly coming to the line, but just failed to get up, and the second favourite hanging on to score by a head in 31.11secs.

FIVE SUIT BRIDGE.

"How to Win at Five suit Bridge," is the title of a new handbook on the increasingly popular variation of contract bridge, written by Edward Hymes, jun., and E. Samuel Fry, jun., holders of an American championship. Their book is an interesting guide to the game, setting out the rules and giving good advice on the theory. Card players attracted to the new game will find it a great standby. It is published by W. Foulsham & Co., Ltd., London, at one shilling.

LINEN BOOSTING

Writer Who Thinks Ulster Has Fallen Behind

THE EXAMPLE OF COTTON

Sir,—As one who has a real affection for Northern Ireland and wishes it everything for its prosperity, may I ask you why I see advertisements for cotton handkerchiefs on every tube station in London, in every railway carriage and bus, and in most of the periodicals, but never an advertisement for your linen handkerchiefs. Have not your people discovered that this cotton trade, by boosting, has to a great extent reduced their business.

I know they made an effort some four or five years ago, but they did not sustain it; and except for a solitary shop here and there, one hardly ever sees "Irish Linen" notified here, except at Xmas time when many of the shops make a show for Xmas gifts. The last effort that was made was for a particular brand, but it seemed a mistake to me that they made a great to-do of the fancy name, instead of using the magic words: "Irish Linen" or "Linen." To first catch the eye what is wanted is few words, but let them be prominent, as a long article in small type is useless.—Yours, etc.,

JOSEPH ROMA
Worcester Park,
Surrey.

LISBURN WORKMEN IN BELFAST.

Sir,—Please allow me to reply to the letter of "Lisburn." It appears that he and his workmates from Lisburn and surrounding country districts contribute nothing to the Belfast city rates except their bus fares from G.N.R. to the aircraft factory. He should appreciate the privilege of working in Belfast without insulting the unemployed ratepayers, and other citizens who have provided comfortable buses for his use without him wanting to monopolise them. He mentions that men residing in Belfast claim the privilege of riding in them. Why should they not? as they are collectively the owners of them. Suggesting that conductors should not allow the ratepayers and citizens to use their own property is sheer audacity.

He also mentions something about special passes, saying that Belfast residents are not entitled to them, and suggests that Messrs. Short & Harland, Ltd., should investigate. The finding of such an inquiry would be that the citizens and residents of Belfast should have the preference not only in travelling facilities but in employment, as they being ratepayers directly and indirectly contribute largely to the welfare of the city, and make another valuable contribution by using gas and electricity.

As a citizen and ratepayer for over 30 years I resent the audacious reflection which he makes on the organising ability of the city's transport staff.

I have been informed that some time ago a drainage work was in progress in Lisburn, and a number of Belfast men who went there seeking employment were told that Lisburn men only were to be started. Belfast employers are courteous enough not to administer the same rebuff, but they employ them, to the disadvantage of thousands of their fellow-citizens and ratepayers, who, though unemployed, help to keep this city in a state of financial solvency.—Yours, etc.,

"UNEMPLOYED RATEPAYER."

ELECTRICITY CHARGES.

Sir,—There have been letters written at different times with regard to the unfairness in charges for electricity for private residences. Whilst I am greatly in favour of the scale of charges known as the valuation tariff, still I am of the opinion that there are many instances here of unfairness owing to the differences in valuation of houses which are exactly similar in size and accommodation but, on account of the locality in which they are situated, one is much more highly assessed than the other, with the result that electricity comes dearer. This should not be. There ought to be a uniform fixed charge for all consumers, for, after all, it is only the equivalent of a meter rent or maintenance charge. A prospective consumer has the option of buying his lighting on either scale, a flat rate of 6d per unit for all consumed, for which he will most probably stint and save in order to keep down the bill, or the valuation tariff, at which he will probably get his light for as little as 2½d per unit or less according to his valuation, and where he need practice no stringent economy because the more he consumes the lower will the rate per unit be, although, of course, there will be more to pay if sheer waste occurs.

After all, electricity is a great boon and worth a good deal for its convenience, but let us all be on an equal footing so far as fixed charge is concerned. It should be quite a simple matter for the Electricity Department to arrive at a uniform charge by reckoning the number of consumers at present who between them produce a certain sum per annum, and thus obtaining a fair average. That average could become the fixed charge for all consumers for the subsequent financial year; then, as time goes on and the number of consumers increases, we may expect a reduction of the fixed charge for the next year or vice versa as the numbers vary or, perhaps, production costs increase. At my last residence the fixed charge was 12s 7d per quarter; now I am paying 16s 10d per quarter for a house of similar accommodation—that is 4s 3d per quarter more for the same electricity!—Yours, etc.,

"CONSUMER."

THE RECRUITMENT OF LABOUR.

Sir,—I see the City Council want the recruitment of labour to be brought back to the Labour Exchange. I say to do away with such, and also to do away with all cards to be had from our Councillors and let the officials of the Council have the option of starting men.—Yours, etc.,

"RATEPAYER."

"Annoyed" writes complaining of the corner-boy nuisance in Pernau Street district, Belfast.

THE BIBLE AND PROPHECY.

Sir,—In your issue of Monday last "Church Member" gives expression to the difficulty he has in tracing the course of world affairs in the Prophetic writings. His difficulty is begotten by the idea that in those writings we have somewhere got an outline of the affairs of the nations of the world. No bigger mistake can be made. Hence the difficulty. The nations—usually named—are referred to only in so far as they come in contact with Israel. Otherwise their existence is a blank. It will be our wisdom to give full scope to the illuminating utterance of Paul in Acts xiv., because from it, if we believe it, the understanding will be helped. He there said: "In former ages He (God) left all the nations to go in their own ways, although He did not leave Himself without testimony, while He did them good from Heaven, and sent down the rain, and made the fruits to grow in their seasons, and filled their hearts with food and pleasure." This makes it clear that these had not "the Scriptures," nor could they have been visited by prophet or seer. "They were without hope and without God in the world."

Still they were not wholly in the dark. These kingdoms and nations had their wars and commotions among themselves, but these are unmarked in the sacred oracles. It is still the same, therefore neither clergy nor laity can find them in prophetic accounts. Israel was God's chosen nation, but they became perfidious, stiffnecked and rebellious. He punished them by four sore judgments, chiefest of which was the sword. The sword spells war. They, therefore, knew what "wars and rumours of wars" meant. If a nation was called to punish them, that nation was named, otherwise it would have no mention.

The nations are still squabbling and warring with each other despite the fact that in the day of Grace the call is to all men everywhere to turn from their evil ways and seek the salvation which is by the Christ Jesus, because that "God hath appointed a day which He will be judging the world in righteousness by that Man whom He hath ordained to be a Prince and a lifegiver." The signs spoken by the Lord as indicating the approach of the end of that age are material and physical, "wars and rumours of war, earthquakes and famines, tempestuous winds and raging seas, famines and pestilences," but if we wish to learn the signs indicating the approach of the end of this dispensation we will have to turn from Matthew and Luke to Paul in his second letter to Timothy, and the first five verses of Chapter iii. give us a complete category, all which signs are spiritual and moral. If we see these things, believing ones should look up even for the calling on high to inherit in the superheavenlies with Him Who loved us unto the death.—Yours, etc.,

"CIVICUS."

USE OF THE WORD "MINIFY."

Sir,—I was genuinely interested in not only the matter of your second leader of Tuesday evening, but also by your departure from the common and ugly—and, I am persuaded, incorrect—inflexion of the English opposite of "magnify." You used—with every support from orthodox etymology—"minify" as the opposite of "magnify." The common Latin base of both ends in "us"—"magnus" and "minus"—yet we never see the form "magnimise" nor, till you had the pluck to do so, do we use "minify" for diminishing. Your adopted form has the approval of both naturalness and euphony. Besides "mise" as in minimise has not the same force as has "ify," so that "minimise" is not the logical counterpart of "magnify." You are correct.—Yours, etc., R. J. CAMPBELL, Ulster Patriotic Union.

ONLY 'REAL AND TRUE' DEMOCRATS

Sir,—I have been told by an American friend of mine that United States of America was the only real and true democratic country in the world, as where you have aristocracy you cannot have real democracy.

I should be most grateful for the opinions of your readers.—Yours, etc.,

A. WALKER.

DON'T BLAME THE BELLMEN.

Sir,—In reply to a notice as regards the price of coal I hope your reader will not blame the bellmen, for we get nothing out of it. It takes more capital and no return for it.—Yours, etc., BELLMAN.

CANADIAN WOMEN'S GOLF.

MISS TIERNAN REACHES FINAL.

OTTAWA, Friday. — Miss Clarrie Tiernan (County Louth), the only British singles winner in the Curtis Cup match against the United States, reached the final of the Canadian Women's Golf Championship here to-day, beating Miss Jessie Anderson (Craigie Hills), former British champion, 3 and 2.

In the 36 holes match for the title to-day Miss Tiernan meets Mrs. Mulqueen, winner of the Canadian Native title in 1936, who beat Mrs. J. B. Walker (Island, Malahide), former Irish champion, by one hole in the other semi-final.

The championship has not been won by a British player since 1922, and Miss Tiernan is the first British finalist since 1923.—Press Association Special.

FERRIER WINS FIFTH TITLE.

SYDNEY, Saturday.—Jim Ferrier became the holder of five golf titles by defeating D. J. Davies 8 and 6 in the final of the New South Wales Amateur Championship at La Perouse.

SOWING WHAT THEY RIP.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.—Players at the Rosanne Golf Club here are requested by the club captain not only to replace divots, but also to sow grass seed.

"NANKING CAPTURED."

On Sunday evening, in the Labour Hall, York Street, will be shown a film illustrative of "Nanking Captured," which is claimed to be a most realistic and terrible indictment of the horrors of air attacks on an unprotected civilian population.

The meeting, intended to commemorate China's National Independence Day, will be addressed, as advertised, by Mr. John de Courcey Ireland, B.A., hon. secretary, Manchester and District China Relief Committee.

The London Diary of an Ulsterwoman

MUCH sympathy has been extended to Lady Katharine Seymour, whose husband died [illegible] week. Lady Katharine, who [illegible] been Lady-in-Waiting to the [illegible] is like her mother, the Duchess [illegible]rcorn, an extremely simple and [illegible]ing woman with a flair for [illegible] and keeping friends. Ulster [illegible] at home and in London are [illegible] deep debt of gratitude to her [illegible] she has done for the Overseas [illegible] and whenever she has been [illegible] spare the time she has attended [illegible] Homes" organised by the Ulster [illegible] here.

Women's Important Part

[illegible] crisis—now happily over—has [illegible] important part women can and [illegible] in a national emergency. It [illegible] out characteristics some of [illegible] we did not possess, and [illegible] whether others did either—calm[illegible], the ability to rise to the [illegible] the desire to be of service. Now [illegible] days those characteristics are [illegible] necessary, and women who [illegible] their services in various [illegible] are not relaxing their efforts, [illegible] are applying themselves with [illegible] vigour to the needs of the [illegible] That there has been a lot of [illegible] has been inevitable; some of [illegible] women, especially, feel that [illegible] of various organisations have [illegible] what confusing, and that they [illegible] do not know in what way [illegible] could be of most use. Now [illegible] are quieter, and we have more [illegible] breathe freely, perhaps some [illegible] might be made to offer women [illegible] as to where they can be most [illegible] In that way much delay might [illegible]vented, and women themselves [illegible] happier knowing that they [illegible] something urgent and were [illegible] in units or organisations [illegible] there was no pressing need for [illegible] I throw out the suggestion as one [illegible] heard it several times on the [illegible] women during the last few weeks.

Lady Carson

Another who has worked hard [illegible] effect its success is Lady Carson, who returned to Town this week after a long holiday with her son in America. Sir Charles Craig, a brother of the Northern Ireland Premier, has also helped it on the road to success. Sir Charles is a ballet fan; he tries to attend the ballet as often as he can, and he likes to discuss it enthusiastically with other "fans." Recently I have noticed that more men than women seem to have a deep liking and a critical appreciation of ballet, though one might have been pardoned for thinking that it was not a masculine hobby. Women like it from the purely æsthetic point of view: men seem to study it more deeply and to derive a deeper pleasure from their criticism of it. But for a non-ballet enthusiast to talk of ballet mania is always dangerous.

Lord Horder's tribute to women doctors must have been received with mixed feelings by women doctors everywhere, and perhaps nowhere more so than in Ulster, where the fight to establish themselves has been, and probably still is, a hard one. I can recall a woman consultant in Belfast telling me not very long ago of the anxious time she has had in her career; her male colleagues on whom she was largely dependent, would not send her patients.

I know of a young Belfast doctor now working in London who met with disappointment when she thought of going into practice in her home town. Yes, as school medical officers, as doctors in clinics, in baby clubs they have done quite well, but outside those openings there has not been the same demand. The prejudice against them in private practice is, I think, dying down. Women go to them more readily than they did some years ago, and even men are not so averse to being examined by them as they used to be. A prominent Ulster medical woman, Dame Louise M'Ilroy, once told me she thought the best opportunities for woman doctors would always be in the treatment of women's diseases and in dealing with children.

Prunella Stack

The wedding of Miss Prunella Stack to Lord David Douglas-Hamilton on the 15th of the month in Glasgow Cathedral has an interest for Northern Ireland people, since Miss Stack's father was Irish and she has many relatives living in various parts of Northern Ireland.

She is to have six child bridesmaids and two grown-up ones. Her wedding frock will be of a parchment velvet made with leg of mutton sleeves, and a five-yard long train. Her attendants will also wear parchment coloured frocks. An unusual wedding gift will be given Miss Stack by her future mother-in-law, the Duchess of Hamilton. It is an opera coat of imitation white ermine. The Duchess of Hamilton has for years taken an active interest in animal welfare, and has carried on an energetic campaign against fur trapping. She herself never wears real fur. Another gift she is giving her daughter-in-law-to-be is a pearl necklace.

ROYAL PAIR AT RACES.

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF GLOUCESTER

NAIROBI (Kenya), Saturday.—The Duke and Duchess of Gloucester, who are spending the week-end at Government House here, were the centre of a [illegible] gathering at Nairobi races this afternoon.

They will also attend the races on Monday, when a new race called "The Duke of Gloucester's Plate" will be run.—[illegible]

DUKE AND DUCHESS OF WINDSOR.

CANNES, Saturday.—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor left the Chateau de la Croe at Antibes by road this morning for Paris. They are expected to remain in Paris until Christmas.—Reuter.

OXFORD CITY BY-ELECTION.

Notice is given by the Speaker (Capt. E. A. Fitzroy) in last night's "London Gazette" of his intention to issue a writ in six days for a by-election in Oxford City. The vacancy was caused by the death in August of Captain Robert C. [illegible], the Conservative member.

BRITISH-ISRAELISM IN BELFAST.

Under the auspices of the British Israel World Federation important lectures will be delivered in the Ulster Hall, the Y.W.C.A. Hall, the Y.M.C.A. Hall, Belfast, on Sunday and Monday, when the speaker will be Mr. Thomas N. Foster, Melbourne, Australia. Mr. Foster, a strong advocate of British Israelism, [illegible] on his way home in a few days, [illegible] lecture on the same subject in Canada.

LONDONDERRY HOUSE, PARK LANE

LONDONDERRY House, the Park Lane residence of the Marquis and Marchioness of Londonderry, has become a legend in the social life of the Metropolis. They continue to be host and hostess at magnificent parties and receptions which are almost unequalled in modern times, and on the lavish scale of the brilliant affairs which, a century ago, in the heyday of Town life, first made this Parkside mansion famous. I have just had the privilege of spending a fascinating couple of hours roaming about its vast interior, recalling something of its romantic history, and "discovering" the scenes of the brilliant functions of to-day.

The house dates from the middle of the 18th century, and originally belonged to the last Earl of Holdernesse. In 1822 the third Marquis of Londonderry, half-brother of the celebrated statesman, Castlereagh, bought the place, the adjoining house, and a garden on the other side of Park Lane for £43,000. Three years later he is reputed to have spent £200,000 on renovations and interior decorations and on the construction of the ballroom, the gallery, the banqueting hall, and the grand staircase.

Formal Opening.

In 1828 the house was formally opened by Frances Anne, Lady Londonderry, with a magnificent ball, when, according to a contemporary newspaper report, "all the interior was illuminated with wax candles. A regular supper was set out in the old banqueting hall at two o'clock. Covers were laid for fifty, and the tables were replenished six times." Later in the same season, Frances Anne gave a fancy dress ball, which the newspaper described as "a scene unexampled in the annals of the fashionable world since the 15th century!" And so, almost continuously, the entertaining has continued in the old tradition by successive Londonderrys and their ladies.

Passing through heavy oak doors, across the threshold that has known the feet of, among others, King William IV. and Queen Adelaide, King Edward VII., the Duke of Windsor, when Prince of Wales, Napoleon III., the Russian Czar Alexander II., the Arab Sheik Abd-el-Kader and Disraeli, I found myself in the great hall, with cream, pillared walls, decorated with garland carving. It is the showplace for valuable canvases and sculpture. The pictures include "St. Cecilia and Angels" by Domenichino and a portrait of the first Lord Howden by the Irish artist, T. C. Thompson. Among the sculptures are fine pieces by Canova, which were acquired by the third Marquis during his embassy in Vienna. There are also, on pedestals, busts of the younger Pitt and the second Marquis, the famous Lord Castlereagh, by the Georgian sculptor, Nollekens.

Magnificent Staircase.

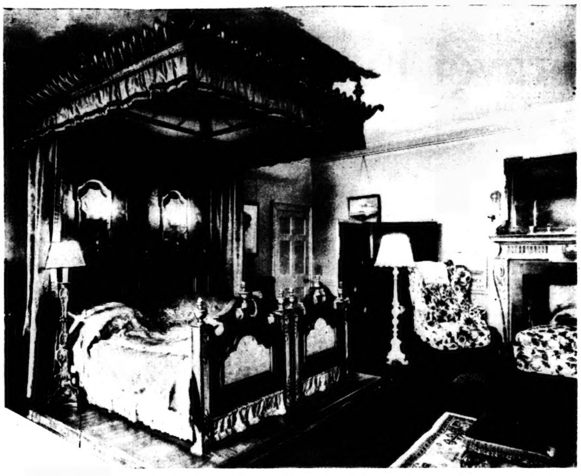
The chief feature of the hall, however, is the magnificent Greco-Italian staircase, covered with rich Persian carpet, which divides half way up into two sweeping flights leading to the ballroom and gallery. At the top of this staircase Lady Londonderry, in all her splendour, stands at receptions to receive her guests.

The banqueting hall is approached through a pair of glass doors from the hall. I found a long, high chamber, decorated in the French baroque style, with painted and grained walls, pillared and carved, and an exquisitely moulded and hand painted ceiling from which hangs a candelabra of clustered candle bulbs. Four polished oak refectory tables, placed end to end, run right down the middle and give accommodation for sixty. Marble-topped tables bearing the Londonderry arms, gilded consoles between the spacious velvet curtained windows and high backed, plush covered chairs with embroidered tapestry panels, complete the picture. On ceremonial occasions the large carved fireplaces have their shelves filled with gleaming gold plate. This is the hall where kings, queens, princes, statesmen and leaders of Society have dined together, and where royalty is still among the honoured guests.



Lady Londonderry's Bedroom.

Back in the hall again I went up a few stairs into the library, a huge room almost completely lined with hundreds of valuable books, including a copy of "Buckingham Palace" presented by King George and Queen Mary to Lord and Lady Londonderry in 1931. Here also is a collection of 10,000 important documents consisting mainly of the political and private papers of the statesman Robert Stewart, Viscount Castlereagh, who was British Foreign Minister from 1812 to 1822. Among the original letters is one from Nelson, written from the Victory on the eve of Trafalgar.

The library walls are covered with gold damask, and almost the entire of one of them is taken up by a picture, dated 1800, of Hambletonian, the unbeaten racehorse owned by the great sportsman Sir Henry Vane-Tempest, father of Frances Anne, Lady Londonderry. Other pictures are mainly ancestral, but particularly attractive are one of the present Lady Londonderry and another of her daughter, Lady Maureen Stanley, both by de Laszlo.

Lord Londonderry's Study.

I looked into Lord Londonderry's study to find a warm, cosy room, contrasting with the other lavish apartments. It is decorated in pink, his favourite colour, with red plush curtains and a pink, blue and beige velvet pile carpet. Lord Londonderry doesn't like to be disturbed in this room. The dictaphone and three telephones on his desk show what a busy man he is when he is settled down here.

The mural decorations of grapes and vine-leaves in the dining-room are interesting, because they are an exact replica of the design in the dining-room of the house in Dublin which was occupied by Castlereagh when he was Chief Secretary for Ireland from 1798 to 1801, the period which culminated in the Act of Union. The pictures include a little-known portrait of Castlereagh by the Irish artist, Hugh Douglas Hamilton, and a sketch in oils by Sir John Lavery of the ballroom of Londonderry House when converted into a hospital ward in 1918. In the ante-dining-room I found myself admiring a display, in large glass cabinets, of dinner and dessert services of Sevres china and Waterford glass used by the third Marquis at the British Embassy in Vienna.

London Correspondent

The ballroom at the top of the grand staircase forms an art gallery for the accommodation of a marvellous collection of full-length portraits of ancestors and their notable contemporaries, among whom are to be found King George IV., the Duke of Wellington, Napoleon III., Abd-el-Kader, and the three Russian Czars Alexander I., Nicholas I., and Alexander II.

With a lingering glance at the massive carved, gilded ceiling, which cost a small fortune to decorate and is now lit by concealed amber strip lighting skirting the top of the walls, I entered the drawing-room, next door. It covers the whole length of the house fronting Park Lane and was originally three separate rooms. It is decorated in two sections, one with green brocade and the other with gold brocade panelled walls, and an intricately carved and coloured ceiling dominates the whole. The pictures include a valuable portrait by Hoppner, a full-length picture by Romney of John Wharton Tempest, with his pony drinking at a stream, and a striking charcoal sketch of the present Lady Londonderry executed by Sargent during the war.

Most Intimate Room.

Now, by way of real contrast, let me take you into the most intimate room of all—Lady Londonderry's sitting-room on the third floor. With walls painted to represent pine, red plush curtains and red damask covered settee and armchairs; every inch spells comfort and personality. It looks a little crowded at first sight, but on closer investigation it is seen that the many objects that fill polished oak tables, inlaid desks, shelves, and brackets, are personal treasures from which no owner would like to be parted. There are family snapshots, chiefly of Lord and Lady Londonderry's four daughters and the son-and-heir, Viscount Castlereagh.

There are personal keepsakes and a "menagerie" of coloured china animals—cats, dogs, a monkey, a wolf, a horse, and so on, some of which have electric bulbs inside them, which illuminate their green eyes. They look rather effective at night. The other lighting comes mainly from a pair of lacquered standard lamps on each side of the settee, with large parchment shades. On the way out I noticed a collecting-box with book matches—a reminder of Lady Londonderry's many charitable interests. She is National President of the Personal Service League and, among other things, is interested in the welfare of disabled soldiers. In aid of these interests, she holds some of her brilliant functions at Londonderry House.

Author and Designer.

Lady Londonderry's accomplishments include garden designing and authorship. Among the number of books she has written is "The Magic Ink Pot," a collection of bed-time stories which she told originally to her youngest daughter, Lady Mary Stewart. In Lady Londonderry's bedroom, which we shall have to make our last port of call, are charming reminders of Lady Mary's childhood days.

The bedroom is a scene of warm colour, set against pastel green walls. A bright Indian carpet covers the floor. Curtains are deep peach, with paler peach net behind, and chairs are covered with bright printed linen. The bed is the "piece de resistance"—an antique canopied example, with decorative foot, painted in rich red and blue, picked out in gold. Red and blue damask are used with effect for drapings from the canopy top, the bedspread is of blue silk, and a pair of candle lights are fixed to the red damask covered head above the pillows; the whole rests upon a waxed wood dais, raised about six inches above the ground. Pinned to a standard lamp right beside the bed I noticed a bunch of small cards and papers. On them are curious, brightly-coloured pictures from the paint-brush of a childish hand. They were Lady Mary's gifts to her mother several years ago, and on the wall opposite the windows I saw another—a picture of a sailing boat inscribed "Shamrock, done by Mary, 1930."

Programme Sellers

THERE are to be more than thirty programme sellers at the midnight matinee in the Ritz on Friday next. Young society girls for the most part, they will all be dressed in nurses uniform. This is because the Newspaper Press Fund Committee are giving part of the proceeds to the Children's Hospital.

Mrs. Victor Clarendon has accepted the captaincy of this band. The married members of these ladies are—Mrs. R. F. Clarke, Mrs. Joseph Cunningham, Mrs. B. Doxford, Mrs. R. Pim, Mrs. M. Shillington, and Mrs. J. R. Workman.

Unmarried members of the troupe are—Miss Jean Baird, daughter of Major Wm. Baird, D.L., chairman of the Newspaper Press Fund (Belfast and District Branch), which is organising the matinee; Miss Pat Mulholland, the Speaker's daughter; Miss Pat Dixon, daughter of Captain Rt. Hon. Herbert Dixon; Misses Maureen and Virginia Clarendon, Miss M'Neile M'Cormick and the Misses Barbara Brett, P. M'Mullan, R. Clarke, J. Dobbs, Myra Gordon, Heather Gray, Barbara Lindsay, Higginson, Orr, P Reade, Rosemary Rogers, Jean and Joan Stephens, S. Bryce Smyth, Ursula Totton, Maureen Uprichard, M. Wilson, and Jill Weldon.

The Ritz is nearly booked up. Not surprising! You all, probably, know by experience what a tip top show the Press Fund matinee always is, and programmes this year are souvenirs you will not want to part with.

Miss Joan Dobbs, I hear, is taking charge of programmes at the annual mannequin parade, which has been organised by Mrs. Drummond Kirkpatrick for several years past on behalf of the Children's Hospital. Tickets for this popular show at Robinson & Cleaver's are sold out.

Miss Dorothy Walker, a noted London mannequin, is displaying matron's and the "not so slim" models. The remainder of the mannequins are well known in society circles here—Mrs. B. Doxford, Mrs. Jack Workman, and the Misses Barbara Lindsay, Jean Baird, Myra Gordon, Constance Higginson, Margaret Wilson, Maureen Uprichard, and Phemie M'Mullan.

★

Killyleagh Castle, where she was born, and Helen's Tower, in the grounds of her home after her marriage, both figure in the memorial window to Hariot Marchioness of Dufferin and Ava, which is to be dedicated on Monday in Clandeboye private chapel. A rainbow, signifying Hope, connects the figures of Faith and Charity; the figure of Faith holds a cross, that of Charity holds an open book with the words: "The greatest of these is Charity." Above this figure are the words: "Many waters cannot quench love, neither can the floods drown it," and above Faith is enscrolled: "The souls of the righteous are in the hands of God."

The font is of white Caen stone with a design of palm and maple leaves on the octagonal panels. These are symbols of Lady Dufferin's work as Vicereine, first of Canada then of India. The christening bowl proper is of brass and the font stands on a black and white pavement.

The window is the gift of 34 relatives, headed by the Marquis of Dufferin, grandson, the Marchioness of Dufferin and representing the Blackwood and Rowan-Hamilton families. The font is the gift of less than 50 friends, the majority in County Down.

I hear that the Earl of Ranfurly is engaged to be married. The bride-to-be is a Devonshire lady, Miss Hermione Llewellyn, daughter of Mr. G. R. P. Llewellyn, Prince Hall, Devon, and of Mrs. Llewellyn, Lowndes Square, London.

Lord Ranfurly is best remembered in Dungannon as Lord Northland. He was only two years old when his father was killed in France. He is 25 and succeeded his grandfather five years ago. Three years previously Northland House, Dungannon, was sold.

Drama in the House of Commons

Saturday Commentary by Lady Oxford and Asquith

IT seems incredible that I should have lived to see what happened in London, and happened all over these islands. Trenches dug, shelters built, sand and sand-bags collected, gas-masks distributed, and every man, woman, and child trained to put them on.

When the Prime Minister gave an anxious House of Commons the first detached account they had heard of the result of his visits to Germany, I wanted more than I have ever done, since the Liberal Party suffered such defeats as it did in the last General Election, to hear this speech. Mrs. Fitzroy, however, who has always been most courteous to me, said there was not even standing room, but that she would send me a ticket for her gallery for Monday last.

I motored down after lunch to the Speaker's House to leave a card on her, accepting her offer, and found the door wide open, with several servants waiting, and strips of red carpet on the steps of the house. I then walked across the courtyard to the entrance of the Speaker's Gallery, and sat in the waiting room at the foot of the lift to watch the arrivals of members of Parliament.

A policeman, whom I knew well, and the lift man, expressed regret that no place had been found for me in the House on such a great occasion. I said that I had no longer any right to be in any gallery. At which one of them said: "You should have a permanent seat, if only in memory of your husband," and added: "Just you sit in the window-sill there. You'll see Queen Mary."

I was Proud to Shake Hands . .

I DID what he told me, and saw Queen Mary and the lovely Duchess of Kent enter Mrs. Fitzroy's front door. A few moments after this, when I was preparing to go home, the Prime Minister and Mrs. Chamberlain came into the passage. I was proud to shake hands with them.

He looked grave, but, considering all he had gone through, of fatigue, abuse, and anxiety, he appeared full of vigour and in the best of health.

When I left home and passed the huge crowd who had awaited his arrival, I seemed to hear—as you hear the sea in a shell held to your ear—the cheers with which all members of the House would greet him.

And my ears did not deceive me, as, when I read the Prime Minister's speech, it was obvious that it was received with greater acclamation than any speech made by any Prime Minister since the War.

The climax was more dramatic than any peroration—when a message was passed to him from Lord Halifax saying that his (the Prime Minister's) invitation to Signor Mussolini to meet Herr Hitler in Munich, to make a final appeal to him to stay his hand, had been accepted. The whole House, strangers, peers, and Ambassadors, rose in a chorus to cheer him.

I rang up one of the Winston group the following morning, and asked if he still thought the Prime Minister was wrong. To which he replied: "Good God, I do! I expected every moment yesterday to be blown up in the street!"

This seemed to me a strange reaction to a speech which told the House a last appeal was to be made for peace. For people of this persuasion there has only been one solution to the terrible crisis which we have been going through in these last agonising weeks, and that was war.

They will say that, had we stuck to the League of Nations and stood up to the enemy from the first, and never had either Sir John Simon or Sir Samuel Hoare as Foreign Secretaries, we should never have come to such a perilous pass.

Question No One Can Answer . .

THIS is probably perfectly true, but the answer is that the League of Nations left us, and, though the men in conduct of our foreign affairs in those days were removed, the Government—perhaps wrongly—felt that standing up meant knocking down.

I have asked every opponent of the Prime Minister in what manner could we have preserved peace, and defended Czecho-Slovakia, without declaring war. We could not have landed troops except by balloons, and would they have approved of our bombing Berlin? I have never had a satisfactory reply.

When I heard that the Munich talks were over, a treaty signed, and that there was to be no war, I felt blood surging again in my tired veins, and every servant greeted me with a smile. But when I read the terms my feelings of relief were overcast with sorrow.

"Peace, with honour" seemed a very unfortunate phrase, and would give the Prime Minister's opponents a great opportunity of winding up their private and public detractions. I suppose none of us in moments of tremendous strain either do, or say, all that is expected of us in life. I wonder what would have been said of him, by one and all of us, if he had brought back war with chaos?

Believe in Force and Violence . .

IT is a melancholy reflection, and perhaps a confession of weakness, that we have to adjust idealism to what is practical in the days in which we are living, and the leaders of the two Governments with whom the Prime Minister has had to contend are not idealists. They believe in nothing except violence and force, and they had been dealing with a man whose whole conception of his duty to his fellow-countrymen is to fight this belief.

Mr. Chamberlain is neither a Liberal, a Tory, nor a Socialist. He belongs to what in my youth was called the Radical Party, and radicalism is as much out of fashion to-day as religion. What was it that differentiated Christ from any of the preachers and philosophers who had gone before Him? The saying which startled the whole world, "Love your enemy."

Nor is this as silly as it sounds. Even people who have no religion bring up their sons to shake hands after they have fought one another. They do not say: "Go on shaking your fists." I know of only two ways of ridding yourself of your enemy. You must either ignore him or make friends with him, since we are all agreed that killing him is neither practical nor desirable. War to-day is a suicide pact.

WESTMINSTER.
"I heard Mr. Chamberlain's speech received with greater acclamation than any speech made by any Prime Minister since the War."

Mr. Duff Cooper's Resignation . . .

I HAVE no time to deal with the final debate, half of which I listened to from the Speaker's Gallery. It was with sorrow that I heard of Mr. Duff Cooper's resignation, and, though the acoustics of the House of Commons prevented either Lady Diana or myself from hearing a quarter of what he said, giving the reason of his resignation, all who heard it told me that it was admirable.

I asked his wife, who was sitting next to me in the same row as Mrs. Fitzroy, the Duchess of Kent, and Mrs. Neville Chamberlain, if she had any idea who her husband's successor would be. She said: "No."

One of the charming things about both Duff and Diana Cooper is that you can argue with them without heat or loss of temper. Two more intelligent companions or true friends never lived, and I only hope that, when these political differences of opinion disappear, Duff Cooper may still be permitted to serve his country.

Unlike some of his closest friends, he has always been a consistent Conservative, and has not puzzled us by the mixed grill of "Labour National" or "National Liberal," nor changed his convictions by joining either my husband, Mr. Lloyd George, or Sir Oswald Mosley.

DRESS SENSE

NEXT to natural beauty, I suppose one of the most useful qualities woman can possess is that rare attribute known as "dress sense." If you have it you will be able to do more with a cheap frock and a few odds and ends than someone without it could do with an exclusive model and yards of furs. But it is a fallacy to believe that, if you are not born with the ability to make the most of your clothes, you will never acquire it. If you can't tell at a glance the sort of thing in which you look devastating, and the sort of thing in which you will shudder involuntarily every time you glance into a mirror, a few simple rules will make all the difference to your success as a clothes shopper.

For the Not-So-Slim.

It is a strange thing that plump people often have a tendency to wear bright colours, shiny materials, stripes going round, and wide belts. These are the very things which they should avoid like the plague. The most slimming type of gown one can possibly wear is of dull black material, cut with a V neck, long sleeves and a straight skirt with a centre pleat. Any lines should always be as nearly vertical as possible, and the only ornaments allowed should be a string of pearls or a simple brooch. Other good colours are navy, blackberry, dark wine, chocolate and bottle green.

For the Too-Slim.

If on the other hand, you want to make yourself appear a little fatter than you are, things you must never wear are light, clinging materials, very low necks, tailored suits, sleeveless dresses, and figure-fitting coats. The best line for you to follow is that of padded shoulders, ruched bodices, wide shiny belts, full skirts, patterned fabrics with large designs or horizontal stripes, big collars, Russian sleeves. Pink, mid-blue, the paler greens, heather mixtures, yellow, tan, beige and fawn are all good colours. You will probably look nicest in a trouser suit with a high-necked jumper in some light shade.

Colour Schemes.

The great point to remember when planning an outfit is that if any of the indefinite shades of brown, fawn, grey or stone are chosen for a dress or suit, the accessories must be either very bright or very dark. Never buy a lot of things in a colour which "goes with everything"—the truth is that it will go with nothing, and you will merely look vague.

RELATIONS WITH ITALY.

THE agreement which was concluded some time ago between Britain and Italy has not as yet produced all the results expected from it, especially in regard to the withdrawal of foreigners from participation in the Spanish Civil War. The "conversations" which have been proceeding of late at Rome between Lord Perth, the British Ambassador, and Count Ciano, the Italian Foreign Minister, however, have encouraged the hope of some definite move being made before long to put an end to a state of things which for well over two years has been taking a heavy toll of life and property in Spain and constitutes a continual threat to the peace of Europe by bringing the Great Powers into the conflict on both sides. The Spanish Republican Government has now taken the initiative by agreeing to the withdrawal of all foreign volunteers fighting in its service, and it is stated that General Franco, whose acquiescence was more grudging, has agreed at least to make a commencement with sending home some of his auxiliaries. Since it is well-known that a considerable number of Italians, some say 50,000, are fighting under the banner of General Franco, the attitude of the Italian Government is of great importance in this connection. Notwithstanding the firm declaration by the leaders on both sides in Spain, it appears that the war must eventually terminate in some kind of compromise, and the cessation of the foreign assistance so liberally given to both parties should help to clear the way for some sort of "commonsense" agreement which while safeguarding the country against Bolshevism and anarchy, will enable democratic institutions to be in some measure preserved, avoiding the two extremes of Fascism and Communism.

The creation of better relations between Britain and Italy has been condemned strongly in some quarters in view of the conquest by the latter country of Abyssinia, a fellow member of the League of Nations, carried out in 1935 and 1936, in defiance of the League's "sanctions" and of the protests of almost the whole civilised world. Yet, as that conquest is now an accomplished fact and Haile Selassie, the titular Emperor of Ethiopia, is an exile, there is little to be gained by maintaining an attitude of aloofness towards Italy for an indefinite period. It was stated by critics of the British Government in the debate on the Munich agreement that Signor Mussolini's authority has been gravely shaken of late, and that the recent action of Britain and France saved his "tottering seat of power," but there is no proof of this assertion. His intervention on the side of peace in the conference referred to has done something to redeem his character from the reproach of being merely a grasping adventurer, and if he gives effective assistance in dealing with the Spanish problem he will have gone far in rehabilitating his reputation. At the same time, the manner in which Italy is imitating some of the most objectionable measures adopted in Germany under Nazi rule is rather disquieting. The measures taken to preserve "purity of race" in a country whose population is of extremely mixed descent, especially in the South, and the repressive ordinances directed against Jews resident in Italy have aroused adverse comment in other lands. They have called forth, incidentally, a protest from the United States Government. It must be hoped that there will be no further advance along this dangerous road, but, at any rate, the domestic affairs of Italy do not concern those who seek her co-operation in the wider field of international policy.

FREEDOM OF CITY COSTS

AND HOW THEY ARE DIVIDED.

LONDON, Saturday.

Mr. Neville Chamberlain, citizen and vintner, is to be offered the honorary Freedom of the City of London. Though the highest honour in the City's gift, the Freedom carries no privileges like immunity from rates and taxes, but the illuminated scroll is handed over in a gold casket worth about £157. Cost to the City for making a new honorary Freeman is about £378. Of that £25 goes to Henry James Manwaring (call it Mannering), who for more than twenty years has written in old English script the Roll of Freedom given to those whom the City honours. The parchment is about 22 inches long, five inches wide. City officials who receive the guest wear new white gloves at the City's expense—usually 13 guineas' worth. Putting up the awnings outside Guildhall costs £50, flowers another £10. There is a band, often the Royal Artillery, to play soft music during the reception. Fee is 18 guineas. Printing invitations comes to £16 or so, hire of microphones costs £3. Toastmaster H. H. Dean, whose sonorous voice prays their Excellencies and Graces to silence, gets two guineas for the job. Rest of the money goes in incidentals like extra staff.—William Hickey in the "Daily Express."

SHOOTING AT SANDRINGHAM.

I hear that the King will be shooting at Sandringham before the end of the month. The pheasants and partridges are fairly plentiful, and the King and his guests are assured of some excellent sport. When the King and Queen return from Balmoral—probably towards the end of next week—they will not spend much time at Buckingham Palace, but will go on to Sandringham for a week or ten days. They will, of course, be back in Town in time for the opening of Parliament, November 1.—Noel Thompson in the "Daily Sketch."

GENERAL'S KNEE BOOTS.

Sir Ian Hamilton was an even more picturesque figure than usual when he attended at Olympia yesterday for the swearing-in of the British Legion "Police Force" that is going to Czecho-Slovakia. The General, who is in his 86th year, wore a pair of black knee boots such as fishermen affect. Into these he tucked the trousers of his grey lounge suit. The general impression, as he also wore a bowler hat, was vaguely equestrian. He said that he had "come to give the Force his blessing." He thinks the Sudetens and the Czechs are "really very good fellows," and told me that it was a "first-class idea" to arm the police force with light walking-sticks only.—"Peterborough" in the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post."

They Risk Their Lives To Travel Free

An American gives some remarkable sidelights on the ways of train jumpers and the dangers that beset them.

●

WITHIN the last few weeks there have been two cases of "train jumping" reported. In one case, a man was arrested after spending an hour on the roof of a night Scot carriage. He said that he was trying to get to Glasgow to meet some friends, and only had 5½d in his pocket when he was found. After his experience, during which the train went through two tunnels, he was "as black as a nigger" and his eyes were red and inflamed.

Much worse, however, was the plight of the Pole who travelled on the axle of an express from Warsaw to Paris all the way with a broken ankle.

You in Europe seldom hear of such cases, but in America stealing rides on the great Trans-Continental flyers is a regular procedure on the part of the unmoneyed, for one of the effects of the slump years was the creation of a new class of hobo, which has not yet died out. Indeed, they are so numerous that it is no exaggeration to say that the hoboes of the States cover altogether millions of miles of country in the course of a year without paying a cent in fare.

☆ THIS free travelling has been raised to the level of a fine art, and the professional experienced hobo travels in some degree of comfort and without a care in the world. The newcomers, however, are suffering somewhat severely, and already there have been some alarming numbers of deaths on the railways from one cause or another.

One way of travelling is known as "riding the rods", and a highly dangerous and uncomfortable procedure it is to the inexperienced. Under all the box-cars, that is, freight waggons, are tie-rods for strengthening the chassis of the car, and it is possible to lie on these rods, gripping an upright, and travel more or less unseen by the brakesmen, on whom falls the unofficial duty of keeping the trains clear of hoboes.

The roar and racket is indescribable. Dust and stones fly up from the track, and being bumped off, in a non-gangster sense, is a grave peril. I have myself seen a young man fall from the rods of a train of box-cars and be instantly cut to pieces.

"Riding the roof," however, is not so bad One can lie on the top of a car, gripping a ventilator, and be fairly comfortable if it is not too cold. It is only safe, however, to ride the roof of passenger trains, as for instance, the Sunset Limited.

The brakesmen of freight trains can see from the ends of the cars whether there is anyone on top of the train or not, and as their duty takes them along the tops of cars—there is a specially built "walk" for them—they can easily discover and throw off a free-rider of this kind. But riding the roof of a fast passenger train is popular, because of the smoothness and rapidity of travel.

☆ I HAVE actually seen the "Limited" from Chicago to San Francisco held up for nearly half an hour whilst the conductor, brakesmen, and one or two local "bulls" (policemen) were trying to beat off some eight or nine hoboes who wished to ride on top. The hoboes rushed for the observation car at the end of the train as soon as it had started, leapt up on the rails and mounted to the roof.

The train was stopped and they were thrown off. Then they divided into two parties, and as the conductor and his allies were throwing off one party from one side of the train, another party of hoboes was climbing up on the other. Eventually the hoboes, with one or two exceptions, won the day, and the "con" had to signal off his train with the knowledge that he had free-riders aboard. Those who did not manage to get aboard were nursing broken heads in a ditch alongside the track.

☆ MORE luxurious is "riding the blind." Every car has a "bellows" attachment by which passengers pass to the next car. But the first car of a train faces the tender, and therefore the "bellows" becomes the "blind."

There is room in the blind for a couple of men to sit in comparative comfort, sheltered from the wind and rain by the tender, and not easily seen.

Conductors and brakesmen have a habit, however, of examining the "blind" at stops, and the treatment meted out to ride-stealers is not of the kid-gloves order. The one advantage of "riding the blind" is that a man so placed cannot be thrown off whilst the train is going, either by the jerking of the carriages or by the act of a brakesman or "con."

Hoboes discovered inside box-cars or "riding the roof," another not uncomfortable way of riding, are frequently thrown off whilst the train is going at full speed, and every year many nameless hoboes are found dead by the tracks after having been thrown off by officious "brakies."

Only the absolute mug rides the pilot. The pilot is the "cow-catcher" of an engine. There is plenty of room there, and the pilot is fairly easy to mount after the train has just begun to pull out, but the intense cold, the noise, and the rocking of the engine are things a man wishes to experience but once in a lifetime. I have had a trial trip and I would prefer to stay where I am rather than repeat it.

On one occasion a friend of mine was riding the pilot through the canyons of Colorado on a bitterly cold night. He was observed by the driver who informed the conductor. The conductor was a kind-hearted man. He did not throw the rider off, but at each stop at water tanks or elsewhere, he came round kindly to find out if my friend "were dead yet." And he very nearly was, of cold, before he had travelled as far as he wished to!

☆ ONE man I interviewed—he was a salesman in ordinary life—had been thrown off a train, luckily for him moving comparatively slowly, in Wyoming and had found himself penniless, dead beat from hunger, and some fifty or sixty miles from any habitation. Unable to walk the distance through fatigue, he had waited for another train, but train after train had passed at far too great a speed for him to get aboard, and he had lain down by the track to die.

For two days he had lain thus, and was on the point of utter despair when in the night a train of box-cars came through fairly slowly. With a final effort the man grabbed for the rods and managed to get aboard, but he was dragged along the track so far that his clothing was stripped from him. He eventually applied for admission to the jail of the next town with little more clothing than one trouser leg and a collar-band.

☆ THERE are certain parts of the States where it is definitely not advisable to ride on the roof. Over the Sierras, for instance, there are "snow sheds," which are artificial tunnels of timber constructed so that the trains will not be held up by snow in the winter. There are 40 miles of snow-shed between Reno, Nevada, and Auburn, California. The danger and discomfort lie in the fact that the oil-burning locomotives let out a vile, asphyxiating smoke, which in the confined space of the snow-sheds may well choke or render insensible anyone who happens to be "on the roof."

One of the best ways of getting over the Sierras is to bribe a nigger Pullman-car attendant to allow one to ride in, say, the linen cupboard of his car. This is not very often done, but it has been done, to my personal knowledge.

In train-jumping, as elsewhere, knowledge counts for a lot, and the professional hobo knows exactly what to do. He can spot the places—water-tanks, signals, etc.—at which the train is most likely to stop: he has perfected methods of jumping the train without being seen: and he has studied the psychology of the brakeman and can tell when he will be thrown off or allowed to stay.

This train-jumping is a game suitable only for the tough, for hoboes are treated as dirt: they are thrown off trains at speed, and nobody asks questions when their bodies are found by the side of the track. The deaths from this cause every year are many, but they know the risk they are taking and chance it.

A Lesson The Crisis Has Taught

Thoughts for the Times

By

Dr. A. D. Belden

One of the most interesting facts about the recent crisis and one that carries with it profound significance is that Mr. Neville Chamberlain found himself naturally and inevitably telling the House of Commons all about it, and at the present moment he is enjoying that common privilege of every British Prime Minister, namely of being shot at from every quarter in fierce and intelligent criticism.

Adolf Hitler has not reported to the Reichstag, and Mussolini has simply expressed himself in journalism through his literary ghost, but the British Premier has willingly and courageously placed himself at the bar of his country's judgment.

That is democracy. How do you like the taste of it? I think every self-respecting man must feel that it tastes good. There is something deeply impertinent in four men disposing of the destinies of millions of their fellows without so much as "by your leave." From this reproach the democratic representatives are at least delivered and in that fact there is asserted the vital right of the self-respecting citizen to be consulted.

::: :::

One cannot help thinking that the German man or woman and the Italian must be feeling rather piqued in having things done for them in this way. It is so fatally easy to be "done for" in a much more sinister way.

But that is dictatorship. It cannot be too strongly insisted that the blame for such a slavish condition rests with the people themselves. The boon of self-respecting citizenship can only be had at a price. That price our ancestors willingly paid in varied forms of martyrdom and part of that price we ourselves will now pay, it is to be hoped just as willingly, in the turmoil of clashing opinions by which we shall thrash out together the rights and wrongs of this matter.

There is a great deal of truth in the saying that "a people has the Government it deserves." Whilst there is a sin of tryanny there is also a sin of being enslaved. Every people owes it to itself in the profoundest way, owes it to its very soul's salvation to maintain itself in freedom and to shoulder bravely the responsibilities that freedom brings.

::: :::

The denial of freedom and the accountability that goes with it is a deep insult to the human spirit. In the teaching of Jesus there is no sin against which He inveighs more strongly than the sin of human contempt. Even when He Himself was dealing with sinners, such as the woman taken in adultery, He never loses the tone of reverence for the personality hidden beneath the sin. "Go and sin no more," He says to her crediting her with sufficient strength of will and decision of character for obedience.

What then can we imagine Christ having to say to the supine multitudes who have permitted their most elementary liberties to be filched from them? Man should not only be free, he should also be liberating, for as James Russell Llowell has so eloquently said—

"They are slaves most base
Whose love of freedom is for themselves and not for all the race."

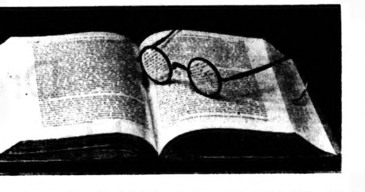
A final consideration is that liberty is for life. It is not an end in itself, it is meant to be a means to richer living, and the people that does not use its liberty vigorously will progressively lose it.

::: :::

In the peace that Mr. Chamberlain has snatched from the jaws of war, however disappointing its terms, there is an opportunity for the free peoples of the world to make a great effort to permeate the dictator-ridden peoples with the ideal of freedom, and to bear effective witness to them as to the joy and the dignity that liberty can bring into human life.

Never, however, must we forget that "the price of liberty is eternal vigilance." If we are proud, as we have every right to be, of the democratic constitution of our country, we must see that it is kept in good repair, that it suffers no despoiling and that the Mother of Parliaments is kept above suspicion.

Books, Books, and More Books —Nobody Can Read Them All



NOW that the crisis is over, people are returning to their ordinary pursuits. Among others busy at the present time are the publishers, who are rousing themselves from the torpor of the summer months and bringing forth new, long lists. So much so that many a book seller, surveying the multitude of new volumes on his shelves, must mutter, "Of books, indeed, there is no end."

It will be several months before the figures for 1937 will appear, but according to the latest statistics there were 16,572 books published in Britain in 1936, the highest total ever and a rise of almost 500.

A quarter of a century ago people regarded with amazement the annual output of authors; but 1910 achieved only the modest total of 10,804 books. Under the abnormal conditions of the war, one of which was an acute shortage of paper, output fell to the lowest figures since the beginning of the century. In 1918 it was only 7,716.

You may still come across copies of books published during the war; you will know them by the horrible greyish paper on which they are printed.

Books, like strawberries and oysters, have their seasons; but, more fortunate than the products of the vegetable world, they have two seasons a year The spring, from March to June, is the publisher's first busy time.

His second and greater, when he will probably unload a third of his annual output, is the autumn season. It begins in September and lasts until the Christmas trade is under way, in December.

Last year, during the four months before Christmas, booksellers had been receiving new books or new editions of old books at the rate of 250 a week. That is, the publishers' lists notified the bookseller of 250 new books weekly; the bookseller would not attempt to stock all the new publications though weeks of work on the part of publishers' travellers would have placed a very large and representative assembly on his shelves.

Fiction has pride of place in the lists of any year. In 1936, 5,000 volumes of the 16,572 published works were of fiction; 2,046 were new books and the remainder reprints. Next after fiction come books for children; there were 1,608 of them in 1936.

THE greater part of the remainder of the total was made up in 1936 of books on the following subjects:—Religion, 948; science, 678; poetry and drama, 596; biography, 863; travel, 661; engineering and allied textbooks, 695; literary criticism, 473. Many people consider that the last category should be more largely represented and that it should have a more destructive tendency.

Sixteen thousand odd new books in a year is surprising enough; and the total last year is expected to top the 17,000 mark. But if you want figures that really make you gasp, consider the total of volumes which 16,500 new books imply.

PUBLISHERS lead off with at least 1,000 copies of each work, and trust devoutly that they will have to print more. Therefore, at least 16,000,000 books were printed in 1936! Probably the figure was nearer 20,000,000 for a fair proportion of the works in fiction, science, biography and textbook categories achieved sales of 5,000 or 10,000 each and one or two best-sellers reached the 70,000 or even the 100,000 mark.

A growing proportion of the general public appears to be growing literate if not literary so that more and more people must to-day have some idea of the background of the book. But still all kinds of misconceptions exist as to the authorship game. Most people suspect, probably, that to have written a book that is published means that one is settled for life with at least a modest income. That, to put it mildly, is not necessarily so.

There are, of course, authors and authors and there are, similarly, different estimates of what happens to the 7s 6d that you pay over the counter for a book. But some of the factors involved, naturally, remain constant.

Most 7s 6d books that he sells means 2s 3d each to the bookseller; the remaining 5s 3d on a book by a reasonably well-known author will go to him and to the publisher in the proportion of about 1s 10d and 3s 5d.

Therefore, a well-established author whose book sells about 5,000 copies can expect roughly £300 in return. But by no means all authors will receive the 1s 10d per copy that he receives. The writer of a first novel, when his manuscript is accepted, will be given an advance of £30 or as much as £50 if his book is, say, a thriller and, therefore likely to sell comparatively well.

At the same time he will sign an agreement giving him 10 per cent royalties on the published work. Ten per cent. of 7s 6d is 9d. But remember the £30 or £50 is an advance and it has to be paid back. It is paid back out of the first royalties accruing.

REMEMBER also that sales of more than 200 or 300 copies of a first novel are unusual. Most literary beginners should be delighted if their first book achieves a sale of 800 copies. On only 300 copies the publisher will not get his advance back. But he is willing to risk a loss if the author shows promise, in the hope that future books by the same writer will reach higher sales. One thing about the advance is interesting. After a reasonable period subsequent to publication, if royalties have not reimbursed the publisher, he does not ask the author to repay the advance out of his private monies!

All nominally 7s 6d books do not actually sell at that price. Nowadays a large part of the sales of any one book go to the big libraries, which receive their copies, because of the size of their order, at reduced rates. And, of course, no matter how many people read a library book, publisher and author benefit only on the outright sale.

The last few years has seen a growth of the reading habit in the people of Britain. Thirty years ago public libraries held the names of only 3,000,000 people on their registers; to-day that number has risen to nearly 8,000,000. These represent only part of the reading public; there must be very few people in the country who never read a book at all. About 1,100 publishers in Great Britain make a living by catering for the tastes of these millions and lately they have introduced some startling innovations into the book trade.

ONE of the most startling has been the introduction of the sixpenny series of books, fiction and non-fiction, and not by any means all reprints. It would not be true to say that the sixpenny series has been hailed with joy by all publishers who, particularly nowadays, have to be very shrewd business men and able to reckon their outgoings and incomings very accurately.

One of the effects of the sixpenny series, they complain, is that the public is given the idea that most books are needlessly expensive.

The author, too, is affected. A total revenue of sixpence from one book means that his share has to be recalculated but, if the book to be issued is a reprint, he usually regards whatever he gets as a gift, for, but for the existence of the series, there would probably be no reprint at all. On one of his books reprinted in the Penguin Library, which sold 250,000 copies, Mr. Bernard Shaw received a royalty of a third of a penny per copy, which netted him a little over £300.

The book clubs, too, of which there are to-day a bewildering number, have changed the prospects of the author from their traditional cast. Books selected by one of these clubs—in some cases the organiser of the club is himself a publisher—sell at half a crown instead of 7s 6d and the author's royalties are correspondingly smaller per copy.

But, as a rule, far more copies of his book are sold through the club organisation than would otherwise be the case so that on the whole the author and, of course, the publisher and the bookseller, gain so much that it is fast becoming a necessary part of an author's training to be able to ingratiate himself with a book club.

Silent Political Veteran.

"Honest John" Takes "Back Seat"

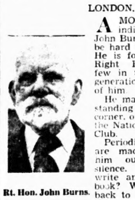
LONDON, Saturday.



Rt. Hon. John Burns.

A MORE retiring individual than John Burns it would be hard to discover. He is for ever "the Right Hon.," but few in the present generation know of of him.

He may be found standing at a street corner, or sitting in the National Liberal Club.

Periodic attempts are made to lure him out of his silence. Will he write an article, a book? Will he come back to Parliament? What are his views on this or that? The answer is the same—A stroke of the little beard, a shrug of the square shoulders, and silence.

Of the steadfastness of his mind and opinions there is, however, no doubt, as his few close friends know. He will be eighty years of age shortly, and the Clapham folk had a great idea.

He started his public life by speaking beside a tree (known as Captain Cook's tree, but why is a mystery), and the would-be's asked the L.C.C. for permission to plant another beside it as a memorial.

All very well planned until the principal in the act was consulted. He would have none of it, and it must be assumed that we have heard the last of "Honest John" as far as public utterances are concerned.

The Motor Show.

THERE is nothing like motor week in London. The show has been on now for 32 years, but one can almost forget the first 20 years of it, because the motor-car was until then a luxury, and the show was an exclusive affair.

Now it is an institution, not only in London, but Paris and New York as well.

The Duke of Kent will open the exhibition, and practically every member of the Royal Family in town will go to it, not for formality's sake, but because they know all about cars, and want to see the latest.

Then a concession to ladies has heightened the popularity, if possible, of the event. There is a novelty. The police, as motorists, are to have space in the show.

There is nobody of whom the motorist has such varying regard as the policeman on the road, or in the flying car, and it is as well they should understand each other's jobs. Here is a chance for them to do it.

"Big Guns" At Donington.

POSTPONED when the two German teams went home at the height of the Czech crisis, the 300 mile Grand Prix race at Donington, near Derby, will be held on October 22.

The date being a Saturday, many Londoners will be able to take the opportunity (seldom given to them in this country) of seeing "pukka" Grand Prix cars in action.

These machines, unlike most of the racing cars seen at Brooklands, Crystal Palace, and other tracks here are "blown" jobs, especially built for racing, and some are capable of speeds up to nearly 200 m.p.h.

They are the "big guns" of motor racing. A good example is the six-litre twin-engined Alfa-Romeo "Bimotore," only one of which has been seen in England.

Hot favourites for the race will be the Auto-Union and Mercedes teams, but the French Delahayes will be serious rivals to the Germans.

The race itself should be well worth seeing—providing that bugbear, last minute scratching, does not spoil it. I have known races where the cream of the entries has withdrawn before the start.

Marionettes as Rivals.

THE recent successes of script films and cartoons should add flavour to the forthcoming exhibition of puppets in London.

These little figures, like the dwarfs and the duck on the screen, are almost human, and it may surprise many to know that there are 23 companies in the British Isles who intend to compete at the exhibition, which will become a non-stop display of acting from eleven in the morning until nine at night.

One has but to observe the unchangeable appeal of the Punch and Judy show at the seaside to see how faithful are the devotees.

The French go in for the serious side of the art, and their plays are definitely "Guignol" in character. Great care is spent in ensuring accuracy of representation (probably greater care than one sees in historic films) and there is a new avenue for this kind of art which the producers have not been slow to recognise—television.

These miniature figures, with their highly coloured lights and hard lines, should televise better than their human counterparts.

Window Dressing.

THE British Pavilion will be one of the most imposing structures at the New York World's Fair, which opens in April.

Final details of the structure, which, with an entire section of the Halls of Nations, will cover 150,000 square feet, have now been approved by the Fair's Board of Design.

The pavilion, with its old-English garden, will command a sweeping view of the Lagoon of Nations, the fair's central spectacle.

Features of the British "window" will be the Hall of Majesty and the Hall of Achievement, and the highest section will attain a height of over one hundred feet.

The Ministry of Health, the Ministry of Labour, and the Board of Education are co-operating in a special exhibition of Australia, New Zealand, and the Colonial Empire.

Several million dollars will be spent to assure that Britain's contribution is worthy and impressive.

Orchids By Air.

I HEARD to-day of a shipment by air—orchids carried from Southampton to Durban to form one of the chief exhibits at a show organised by the Durban and Coast Horticultural Society.

The society has been encouraging its members to grow orchids, many varieties of which are found to do well in the Durban climate, and it was in order to provide an incentive to this branch of horticulture that they decided to invite the support of prominent orchid growers in England.

It was considered that the exhibition of English orchids at the Durban show would enable members to see the possibilities open to them, and would encourage them in further efforts.

An approach was, therefore, made to English growers asking for their co-operation—a co-operation which was granted very readily, specials crates of orchids being prepared for despatch.

Thanks to the speed and smoothness of their journey over the flying route and also the careful handling they received from the Airway officials, the orchids reached their destination in perfect condition.

LAWNS during the next few weeks will be receiving their last cutting. [illegible] well not to cut them too bare as [illegible] would be too much exposed to keen [illegible]. Bushes in shrubberies will now [illegible] to be pruned into shape, [illegible] where they had crowded into [illegible]. Care must be taken now to [illegible] the shoots for flowering next [illegible] to thin out with judgment. [illegible] can be cut hard back to the [illegible] but the Mock Oranges must not [illegible] like a hedge. Some shrubs [illegible] have much overgrown will stand [illegible] when overgrown—for [illegible] Choisya Ternatas and Diervillas [illegible] Honeysuckles.

[illegible] garden visited a clump of [illegible] Sino-ornato was showing its [illegible] flowers. These plants are [illegible] found difficult to grow. The [illegible] of them was seen in the [illegible] a gravel walk belonging to a well-kept garden. The flowers [illegible] a line of blue for a con[illegible] distance, but these plants were [illegible] which is in bloom from March. The compost recommended for [illegible] is "two parts good loam, one [illegible] and one part grit or broken [illegible] and coarse sand."

[illegible] that Gentianas require [illegible] during dry weather in summer. [illegible] be grown from seed, but are [illegible] germinate.

[illegible] attractive displays of flowers in [illegible] beds were seen recently. One [illegible] of red Salrias. There were [illegible] hundred of them in one [illegible] and they looked remarkably [illegible] and bright. Salrias are half [illegible] perennials which receive the same [illegible] as Dahlias. [illegible] they are brought into shelter [illegible] comes on, and stored in a [illegible] place until spring. Then in [illegible] the roots are divided. Every eye [illegible] plant. When they have [illegible] started into growth they are [illegible] out about the end of May. [illegible] Splendens Blaze of Fire is a new [illegible] which is very brilliant. It comes [illegible] and is dwarf in habit. It and [illegible] Patens Cambridge Blue may be [illegible] from seed. Blaze of Fire is [illegible] recommended for bedding if a remarkable display is wanted. Another bed which was much admired was one of Begonias which receive the same treatment as the Salrias. They may also be raised from seed.

One garden visited contained a large number of these plants, and a greenhouse was filled with them as the owner made a speciality of them. They were seen in different sizes of growth. The seedlings in the pans devoted to their culture were not larger than pin heads and required to be handled carefully.

In a cold greenhouse some tomatoes which were ripening slowly are now turning brown and red. This was helped by keeping the windows closed, as by doing so the hot sunshine gave a steaming atmosphere. A blue passion flower raised from seed in the spring time has now run about eight feet in length and is being trained along wires.

Next spring one third of it will be cut back. A rose, Lady Hillingdon, which was raised from a cutting and placed in an eight inch pot is now five feet in height, is also being trained along a vacant spot in the roof. The rose Ophelia which occupies the south side of the roof is still giving some nice blooms, over one hundred having been cut this season.

Out of doors another bush of climbing Lady Hillingdon rose is 20 feet in height and is trained to branches of a willow which were specially left for this purpose. The other branches of the willows having been cut out. This rose has bloomed all summer, and at present is showing many beautiful flowers. This rose was also raised from a cutting which was planted out-of-doors.

Planting of Roses.

The planting of roses begins at the end of this month, and is continued during November and early December, so those who are going in for a collection of them should get catalogues, and, having made a choice, should send in their orders at once. A rose bed, like daffodils, is also a good gardening investment, as with proper care and attention it lasts for many years.

In a villa a very attractive vase of autumn hardy perennial flowers was noted. It contained large flowered Montbretias, Scabious Caucasica, Gaillardaia Grandiflora, double perennial sunflowers, Echinacea, and Schizostilis Coccinea. Coming at this time of the year when flowers are getting scarce, the colours were bright and effective. Single dahlias are now at their best, and though transient are useful for indoor decoration. Roses when cut only last a few days, especially in warm rooms, the heat bringing them full out and scattering their petals.

One day the sunshine had brought out the bees, and butterflies. A tortoise shell butterfly was seen sitting on a pink flower of Escallonia, but the autumn gales have come.

SISTER SHIP FOR NORMANDIE.

TO CROSS IN FOUR DAYS.

ESTIMATED COST £12,000,000.

NEW YORK, Saturday.—The general manager of the French Line here announced to-day that a sister ship to the Normandie is to be built.

The liner, which is to be faster than the Normandie, and capable of crossing the Atlantic in four days exactly, will cost 60,000,000 dollars (£12,000,000), and will have larger third class and tourist accommodation.

Freight space will also be increased, and a garage provided to accommodate 100 cars.

The ship is to be ready by 1942.—Reuter.

"NOTHING DEFINITE YET."

PARIS, Saturday.—The French Line headquarters here state that nothing definite has been decided yet as regards any plans for a sister-ship for the Normandie.

Both in Paris and in New York the idea has been put forward by high officials of the line that it might be desirable to add another and perhaps a faster ship ti the fleet, but these suggestions are not official.—Reuter.

PALESTINE PLAN.

JEWS ARE PERTURBED.

PROTEST TO ZIONIST LEADER.

Reports in London newspapers of the Palestine settlement plan, proposed by the Foreign Minister of Iraq, Sayid Atufik al Suwaidi, have greatly perturbed the Jewish community in Palestine.

The plan is for an independent State under British control which would be gradually handed over to a National Government. The National Council of Palestine Jews yesterday sent the following cable to Dr. Weizmann, the Zionist leader:—

"The Jewish community is profoundly shocked at the reports of consultations between the British Government and the representative of an Arab State regarding Palestine. The proposed Arab scheme means the closing of the doors in Palestine to Jewry and the destruction of Israel's last hope.

"The community has been standing gallantly in defence for 30 months and will not retreat without any effort to frustrate this design. We refuse to believe that Britain, to which the Jewish people has linked its faith, will support such designs, in the false assumption that the peace of the country can be restored by robbing Jewry of its rignt. The community is solidly behind you."

A British and Jewish staff is operating the passenger and goods trains, [illegible] all Arab railway employes were absent from duty at Haifa yesterday. Work at Haifa Port is normal, but the [illegible] authorities are taking precautions.

[illegible] ceasing of work by the Arabs is [illegible] of a politic religious innovation, the observance of Friday as a holiday. Most of the Arab shops were also closed.

MOSLEM-ARAB CONGRESS.

The World Moslem-Arab Congress, [illegible] to consider the situation in Palestine, met yesterday under the presidency of Allouba Pasha, an Egyptian Senator and former Minister, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Cairo correspondent.

The delegates, who have come from the more important Moslem and Arab countries, aim at finding a basis for a settlement of the Palestine problem acceptable to Britain. They hope to send a delegation to London to offer mediation.

About 2,000 people were present and the proceedings were marked by great enthusiasm. It is expected that the congress will last three days.

In his opening address Allouba Pasha [illegible] the history of the Arab occupation of Palestine and described the Jews' "violent attack" on the Arabs. He condemned the commission's partition plan, [illegible] he stated, gave the Jews fertile plains and the Arabs the barren hills.

After denouncing the Balfour Declaration the speaker appealed to Mr. Chamberlain to help the Arabs to obtain [illegible] rights, as he had helped the Sudeten Germans to obtain theirs.

The Egyptian organisers of the congress kept the meeting on peaceful lines and nipped in the bud any anti-British or anti-Jewish demonstrations.

255 NATURALISED BRITONS.

The number of people to whom certificates of naturalisation were granted during the month of September was 255, as shown in the "London Gazette."

Of the total 59 were German, 31 Russian, 27 American, 17 Italian and 12 Austrian. There were only two Czecho-Slovakians among those naturalised.

IN COCKFIGHTING CASE.

WINS APPEAL: TO PAY OWN COSTS.

William Hully, a 74-year-old farmer, of Bousfield Farm, Orton, Westmoreland, was allowed his appeal at Westmoreland Quarter Sessions at Kendal on Friday against his conviction and a total fine of £20 on charges of assisting at the fighting of cocks; causing unnecessary cruelty to birds, and permitting cockfighting to be held on his land.

The Chairman (Sir Lancelot Sanderson, K.C.), said that in the opinion of the magistrates the circumstances were such as would make it not unreasonable to include Mr. Hully in the proceedings, and accordingly each party was ordered to pay its own costs.

The appeal was a sequel to a prosecution at the instance of Our Dumb Friends' League at Hackthorpe, in June, arising out of a county championship main between birds representing Cumberland and Lancashire, when, in addition to Hully, 16 defendants were fined.

Hully said that he had never authorised any cockfight on his land, and the first he knew of it was when at his son's farm one of his grandsons told him. He asked a man what was going on and the man, handing him one of the birds, says, "Never mind old chap. Here's a dinner for you."

BOY KILLED IN VENDETTA.

TWENTY-FIVE KNIFE WOUNDS.

ORAN, Friday.—A vendetta between Arab children at Mazagram has cost the life of a boy of eleven, while another, a year older, is in hospital with 25 knife wounds. The children quarrelled while attending a wedding banquet yesterday and withdrew to a neighbouring open space to settle the question with knives.

The younger child was killed, and to-day, as the elder was getting into Black Maria to go to the scene of the tragedy with a view to re-enacting it, brothers of his victim fell on him with knives, and before the police could intervene he was wounded 25 times.—Exchange.

CITY Y.M.C.A. DEBATING SOCIETY.

Last winter the City Y.M.C.A. Literary and Debating Society had a visit from Professor R. J. Fynne, professor of education at Trinity College, Dublin. He created an excellent impression, and will open this year's session with a lecture on "Oliver Goldsmith." This should be a great literary treat, in view of the fact that some of the present day literary giants are refocussing their thoughts on Goldsmith's writings.

Considerable interest is being evinced in this visit, and it is anticipated that there will be a large attendance at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night. Mr. A. Bonaparte Wyse, chief of the Educational Department of Northern Ireland, will be in the chair.

EMPTY BOTTLES

BELFAST SALVAGE PROBLEM.

CLAIM BY DAIRY OWNER.

DECREE IN TROVER ACTION.

At Belfast Recorder's Court to-day, Samuel J. Wright, Deerpark Dairy, Belfast, sued John Bannister, sen., milk vendor, Beersbridge Road, Belfast, to recover £5 for trade of milk bottles. Mr. E. W. Jones (instructed by Mr. S. V. Tughan) was for plaintiff, and Mr. F. A. L. Harrison (instructed by Mr. Jas. Boston) represented the defendant.

Plaintiff said that in the course of business he lost quantities of bottles. He found one lot of his stamped bottles in defendant's possession and recovered them, but when he found a second lot the defendant began smashing the bottles, so witness went to the police.

Answering Mr. Harrison, witness said the bottles cost about 5d each. There were large numbers of bottles lost by being left outside doors. If the customer put the empty bottles in the ashbin he would expect them to pay for them.

Mr. Harrison went on to ask the witness about bottles being found on Corporation dumps.

The Deputy-Recorder asked what that had to do with it.

SALVED FROM DUMPS.

Mr. Harrison said that his client was in business buying bottles, which were rescued from the Corporation dumps. There was a very big business done in recovering articles of value from the dumps, and the defendant had been engaged in buying dirty bottles off the dumps and having them washed.

Constable Peters, who was called in by the plaintiff, said there was a big business done in salving things from dumps, and large numbers of milk bottles were found.

The Deputy Recorder asked if a valuable gold watch was found would it belong to the finder?

Mr. Harrison said a valuable gold watch, which might be lost, would be different from stray bottles, which he contended were res derelicti.

His case was that the bottles were abandoned property, and that the ownership was vested in the first finder. His client bought the bottles from the man who reclaimed them from the dumps, and said he had the right to sell them to plaintiff.

Defendant said that a Mr. Cooke had the Corporation contract for salvage at the dumps, and witness paid him 8d a dozen for bottles. When he got certain numbers of each trader's bottles he notified them. The plaintiff removed some bottles without permission, and later he refused to pay for a second lot. Witness had handed over the business to the Milk Vessels Recovery Association.

Robert Cooke, salvage contractor to the Corporation, said he recovered large numbers of milk bottles from the dumps and sold them to Mr. Bannister.

The Deputy Recorder gave a decree for £2.

TRAIN ACCIDENT AT ABERDEEN.

40 FISHERWOMEN INJURED.

FIVE DETAINED IN HOSPITAL.

Nearly 40 fisherwomen were injured in a train accident at Aberdeen last night shortly before they were to have left for Lowestoft. They were members of a party of 200 who were going south for the East Anglian season.

When an engine was being shunted on to the carriages it failed to stop and, crashing into the body of the train, forced in the walls and flooring of the first carriage.

Five of the women were seriously injured and detained in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary, but after treatment in the station waiting rooms, which resembled field dressing stations, the main party later left for Lowestoft in another special train.

Most of those injured were in the first compartment and were hurt by smashed glass and, in some instances, by luggage falling from the racks.

The five women detained in Aberdeen Royal Infirmary are:—

Elizabeth Simpson (19), Fraserburgh—head injuries;

Barbara Rennie Noble (22), Fraserburgh—head injuries and concussion;

Annie Watson (60), Aberdeen—head injuries; and

NEW ANTI-AIRCRAFT UNIT.

Lieut.-Colonel G. A. H. Fairbank, retired, Territorial Army, has been selected for command of the 80th Anti-Aircraft Brigade, Royal Artillery, a new unit.

BRIDEGROOM-TO-BE MISSING.

Eight days before the date fixed for his wedding, James R. Beezer (28), lorry driver, of Coltman Street, Greenwich, is missing.

His mother said yesterday—"My son was engaged to Miss Lucy Hedges, of Forest Hill, S.E., whom he had known for four years. He had taken a flat at Forest Hill, which was to be their future home, and spent his fortnight's annual holiday last month getting it ready. He had been employed by the same firm at Greenwich for 15 years, and his job is waiting for him there. We can think of no reason for his disappearance."

TRAINING CLASSES.

BIG GATHERING EXPECTED.

SESSION'S FIRST ENROLMENT.

The postman is likely to have a busy time in May Street next week, as some 900 copies of the programme for the series of conferences and training classes have been sent out to all officers in the city and Province, and to men Life Boy leaders. Enclosed with each was a reply card on which they were asked to state their intention of being present to tea on Friday and Saturday. If all who have been invited decided to come to tea in the Cafe Royal on Friday night, it may be able to accommodate all, but one wonders what would happen if anything like 900 signified their intention of coming to tea in Boys' Brigade House.

One thing is certain, satisfactory arrangements will be made for all who come, and the thought of the committee is "the more the merrier." When it is remembered that the Battalion can have porridge, boiled eggs, tea and bread ready for anything up to 1,000 people by eight o'clock in the morning at camp, it will be realised that the handling of next week-end, however big it might be, will not fully tax the resources.

It is a long time since anything quite so ambitious was attempted. On Friday night after tea the first speaker will be the Brigade secretary, Mr. G. Stanley Smith, who will speak on "The Coming Session;" then Mr. G. T. Harvey, an Edinburgh Officer and a member of Brigade Executive, will speak on "Church, State and Boy," and the Moderator of the General Assembly, Rt. Rev. W. J. Currie, B.A., D.D., who is chaplain of 1st Bangor Company, will speak on "Rivalry."

PRACTICAL DRILL PERIOD.

On Saturday afternoon from 3-30 to five there will be a practical drill period under Mr. T. Doran, whose expert instruction over the past number of years has done wonders for the standard of drill in the Battalion.

After tea at 5-30 in Boys' Brigade House, Mr. George Crawford, captain 9th Belfast Company, and former hon. Battalion secretary, will tell "Something About the Battalion." This will be followed by a demonstration talk by Mr. James Dorward, B.Sc., also a member of Battalion Executive Committee, on "The Company Bible Class." The Brigade secretary will then speak on what is one of the most vital subjects of the day, "Discipline." At all sessions there will be an opportunity for questions and discussion.

The week-end will close with a devotional service on Sunday evening at 8-45, which will be conducted by the Rev. J. B. Woodburn, M.A., D.D., chaplain 9th Belfast Company. This service will take the place of the usual opening session officers' devotional service.

In the following week-end and for some weeks classes of practical instruction will be carried through. Full details of these classes are in the programme already sent out.

ON THE WAY TO CANADA.

At least one regular reader of our Notes will not see this week's issue for some time. As they are being read, Mr. W. H. M'Vicker is on his way to Canada as an official B.B. visitor. A full programme has been drawn up for him, including addresses at church services, radio talks, inspections, officers' conferences, and lots of meetings. Those responsible for The Boys' Brigade in Canada are determined to do all in their power to keep it on right lines, and they are looking forward with great enthusiasm to Mr. M'Vicker's arrival.

From the Belfast Battalion Council meeting last Friday night an assurance of good wishes and the prayers of the Battalion were sent to Mr. M'Vicker. The undertaking on which he is engaged is a particularly responsible one, and the thoughts and prayers of his old comrades in the North of Ireland will do much to strengthen him in it.

At the Missionary Rally of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland, held in the Assembly Hall on Thursday night, Brigade boys acted as stewards. In an appeal made by Rev. H. P. Cromie, B.A., for medical equipment, he told of the beautiful new operating theatre which had replaced the old one at Wadhwan Camp, and which, with the most modern operating table, had been provided on the promise of The Boys' Brigade in Ireland to raise the cost. More than half of the amount is already paid.

CLASS FOR OFFICERS.

A meeting of the staff of the Battalion Officers' Training Course was held this week under the chairmanship of Mr. Joseph Millar, commanding officer, when full plans were made for the course to commence on Wednesday, November 2. It was learned with great regret that Major J. W. Harper, who had been associated with the course since its commencement some years ago, will not be able to take part this session. Mr. T. Doran—so well known in the Battalion as a drill expert and enthusiast—has agreed to be responsible for the drill section of the course.

The Battalion Demonstration Committee has got into full swing already this session. The experiment is being tried of dividing the committee into two sections, one of which will be responsible for the programme and the other for organisation.

The honour of having the first enrolment for session 1938-39 goes to John White Memorial Church, Tennent Street. Some time ago a Life Boy Team was formed, and now after the usual preliminary meetings the team has been officially visited and enrolled. The team is under the guidance of Mr. T. G. Robinson, and the membership is over 40, with an average attendance of 38. In due course a B.B. Company will be enrolled.

COMPANY NEWS.

The 15th Belfast Company (Newington Presbyterian Church) held the inaugural parade of its 28th session on Monday evening. The opening service was conducted by the captain, who afterwards welcomed the new members and outlined intended activites.

Following a display of ceremonial drill and a march past headed by the bugle band, the new appointments and promotions were announced. In order to facilitate administration the company was divided into four sections, each section to be under the supervision of a member of the staff; and the sections were further sub-divided into squads, each under the command of a non-commissioned officer.

Among the new activities mentioned by the captain is a flute band, which is making excellent progress. Provision has also been made for classes of instruction in first aid, swimming, wayfaring, gymnastics, bugle and pipe bands. As in former years, a team has been entered in the Battalion Football League and is giving a good account of itself.

The attendance at the Bible class is very encouraging, over 100 being present last Sunday morning.

REMINDER TO ROME.

TREATMENT OF JEWS.

VIGOROUS NOTE FROM U.S.

INTERPRETED AS WARNING.

WASHINGTON, Friday.—One of the bluntest notes that the United States Government has ever delivered in connection with Jews in Europe or other similar questions has been handed to the Italian Foreign Office by Mr. William Phillips, the U.S. Ambassador to Rome.

It is interpreted as a warning that discrimination against Jews who are residing in Italy, but who are American citizens might call for retaliatory measures against Italians living in the United States.

Although cloaked in diplomatic language the meaning of the Note is regarded as being unmistakable.

After noting that Italians who have entered the United States legally are "accorded the full protection of our laws with respect to persons and property, enjoy religious freedom, no discrimination on grounds of race or creed," the Note concludes:—

"My Government believes therefore that the Italian Government will decide that American citizens who are lawfully residing in Italy will not be discriminated against on account of race or creed, and will not be subjected to the provisions of the nature of those embodied in the decree laws in question."—Exchange.

30,000 MAY ESCAPE DECREE.

It is not yet possible to say how many of the 77,000 Jews registered in the recent special Jewish census in Itlay will come under the disabilities decided on by the Fascist Grand Council, but probably 30,000 will escape (states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Rome correspondent).

The fact that no disabilities are to be imposed on the families of Jews who gave their lives in the Libyan, Great War, Abyssinian or Spanish Wars, who died for the cause of the Fascist revolution, or who became members of the Fascist Party not later than 1922, does not release all the members of such families from the effects of the new laws.

Only descendants of these people are excepted, and the exceptions hold good only if the Jews concerned are loyal citizens and are not anti-Fascists.

All Italian Jews who have not fought as volunteers for their country, or otherwise distinguished themselves, will be excluded from the Fascist Party. They will be unable to own or manage businesses in which there are more than 100 employes.

They must not own more than 150 acres of land, and they will not be allowed to serve in the Italian army in peace or war. A special Commission which is to be appointed shortly will examine the cases of Jewish families who have rendered signal services to the State in civilian capacity.

The position of Jews who now exercise the fee professions has not yet been decided on, but the fact that Jews have been expelled from all schools and seats of learning, either as professors or scholars, in itself indicates the gradual elimination of members of their race from the legal, medical, dental and other learned professions.

Any attempt to force Jews to abjure their faith will be severely repressed, and, in fact, Jews are to be allowed to practise their religion without hindrance or persecution.

The position of foreign Jews is only slightly modified, since the decree of last August deprived them of acquired Italian citizenship and expelled them all within six months.

CANCEL GERMAN JEW PASSPORTS.

BERLIN, Saturday.—A decree changing the existing passport regulations for Jews has been issued by the Minister of the Interior to-day.

Passports of German Jews living in Germany are declared to be invalid and must be returned within a fortnight.

This regulation also applies to German Jews living abroad as soon as they re-enter Germany.

Their passports will be made valid again after having received a special mark before leaving Germany.

German Jews domiciled in Germany will be given identity cards instead of passports.

Jews violating these regulations will be punished.—Reuter.

DANZIG JEWS FLEE TO AMERICA.

A number of Jews, who have deemed it wise to leave the Free City of Danzig, arrived in New York yesterday on board the Dutch liner Noordam, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

Among them were 14 members of the Anker family, ranging in age from 11 to 61. The family was one of the wealthiest groups of property owners in Danzig, where their holdings included the largest granary.

The Ankers said that they were so convinced that Herr Hitler would take possession of the city within three months that they decided to sell everything at a loss and move to California. They brought with them a letter of credit for more than £20,000.

A.R.P. IN SCOTLAND.

CHURCH LEADERS' ATTITUDE.

The appeal made by the Government for civilian volunteers for air raid precautions work is "commended to the earnest consideration of the people of Scotland" in a message signed by six leaders of Churches in Scotland.

The appeal states:—"All right-thinking men and women deplore the necessity for such preparation, but in the circumstances in which we find ourselves it is impossible to dispute it. The object of the scheme is in no sense militaristic. It is that we should so organise ourselves that in the event of air attack we may be in a position to minimise the suffering of our people."

NEW SCALE WAR RISK RATES.

Minimum war risk rates for vessels sailing on and after October 8, 1938, only to apply to risks underwritten, or declarations accepted by underwriters on and after October 8, 1938, for direct shipments, all rates subject to sailings within seven days, subject to current institute war clauses, excluding Spain and Spanish possessions.

U.S. MOTOR INDUSTRY UNREST.

DETROIT, (Mich.), Friday.—The recrudescence of labour troubles has caused the closing of Chrysler's Plymouth plant to-day when the United Auto-Workers' Union refused to enter the works. They said they were not striking but merely refusing to work more than 32 hours a week.

Meanwhile at the Fisher body and Pontias factories work has been resumed after closing down on Thursday. Members of the United Auto-Workers' Union are prepared to strike on Saturday at the Buick Works at Flint, Michigan, unless grievances over seniority and other matters have been settled.—Exchange.

Owing to the wintry weather the small boats were only able to be out for a short time on a couple of nights this week and had very light catches. The top shot was five mease.

The Annalong boats had fairly good catches of herring at the beginning of the week, and there were also good returns of dogfish. Owing to the unsettled weather, there was no fishing on Thursday and Friday.

An After-War Story

"AND TELL OF TIME" by Laura Krey (Collins, 8s 6d).

THE publishers have already labelled "And Tell of Time" as a sequel to the enormously popular "Gone With the Wind," and it is impossible not to compare the two books although the similarities are mainly on the surface.

For those who are beginning to tire of novels of the American Civil War written by Southern protagonists it will be a relief to learn that though Mrs. Krey's story has its roots in the War itself her actual narrative is concerned throughout with the complex, and for the Confederate States even more difficult and tragic, times of the Reconstruction. The country of which she writes in the nightmare years is further south this time—Texas, where South and West intermingle and Southern tradition dies hard.

In "And Tell of Time" as in "Gone With the Wind," realistic use is made of history and hearsay but the approach to life in the former is much more romanticised. There was an astringent tartness in Miss Mitchell's writing which combined with the vitality of her two central figures so completely shorn of all sentimentality, that even apart from the dramatic action made her story so engrossing.

★

DEEP OUTLOOK

THERE is less actual action and consequently a slower tempo in Mrs. Krey's story but this is more than compensated by a deeper outlook that makes it a more thoughtful piece of writing.

This is the story of Cavin Darcy—a man returning from a needless war to which he had ridden away a boy—of his determination to build again the life that his father and grandfathers had wrung from a vast roadless country where dangers were so many as to almost become unregarded. On his way home he stops to greet relatives in Georgia and from the shelter and security of her home brings with him his cousin Lucina as his wife. Lucina is the typical Southern belle of fiction, deceptively gentle yet as firm willed and capable as any pioneer from the hardier North.

Cavin is a single-minded man, sure and undeviating of purpose, in unconscious harmony with the earth which is his birthright and livelihood. With the war over he finds that his fight for existence has only begun and now not only has he to fight for himself but for posterity, for the future freedom and security of his children and their children after them.

For him and for his wife there comes a peaceful ending but Mrs. Krey leaves the story with a question mark; the freedom for which one generation fought and won—the return of true constitutional representative government and with it personal security for life and property, is the gift they can make their children but no one generation can shoulder the burdens and responsibilities of the next and so we are left to imagine their children carrying on their work.

NEW LOCALE

TEXAS, for the locale of such a novel as this, is fresh ground, but in all that goes towards painting a picture of idealised plantation life, the belles and dashing young heroes, the devoted darkies, the balls and barbecues, the spacious feeling of leisure unbounded, there is little to differentiate between Virginia, Georgia or the less populated Texas. The setting is becoming familiarised and attention is consequently harder to hold on a time that has passed away.

There is a danger, at least where English readers of American fiction are concerned, to forget that there are other equally romantic and thrilling periods of American history waiting to be explored, and what is more important, however necessary it is to know a nation's past life before an understanding of the present is reached, there comes a point where a nostalgia for the past can only hinder a clear understanding of the present.

Mrs. Krey, as a newcomer to the ranks of novelists, has an evident understanding and knowledge of her people. She has an excellent and flexible style, so much so that her talents and capabilities could grapple with the less superficially dramatic and romantic, but infinitely more difficult task of depicting American life and people as they are to-day instead of covering, however excellently it is done, ground which has been gone over so many times previously.

"GROWTH OF A MAN," by Mazo de la Roche (Macmillan 8s 6d).

THIS is a novel of the solid type, free from the sordid and sensational. It moves along almost as gradually as the life of Shaw Manifold, the principal character as unfolded into a strong personality which overcame early handicaps and adversities.

The background is in Canada, or to be more exact, in the province of Ontario, where the hero, if he might so be called, is born into a family as respectable as it was dull. His childhood and boyhood were uneventful. He was an ordinary child and he was not particularly attractive or winsome but he had a desire to get on in the world. In the midst of unlovely, if virtuous folk, his character slowly matured, and as his book studies progress he comes under the spell of a school pal Elspeth who was destined to play a big part in his life.

He finds his career in forestry and in the wilds and wastes of his native province where work is hard and man as equally hard he has a physical breakdown, which is not surprising in view of his early upbringing. He is sent to the Adirondacks to recuperate and in the glory of the hills he seeks health. The monotony is killing and it is not till he is taken to the adjoining province of Quebec that he recovers.

There is a fine description of life in the Quebec sanatorium and for sheer vividness and realism the account of the Canadian winter and the Northern forest would be hard to beat. The story is not all laid in Canada as the hero goes into the States in his search for forestry work, his long tramp from New York to Alabama being one of the best parts of the book. It ends in San Francisco. Altogether "Growth of a Man" is a splendid novel.

The Dog and the Monument

Six-Minute Story No. 19: by Rearden Connor

THE three men sat round the little rickety table in the tenement room Two of them, heavy, broad-faced fellows named Lanigan and Quinn, were smoking cigarettes, staring at an object which the third, a thin, sharp-featured, dark-haired man named Carey, held in his hand.

"Listen to me now!" Carey was saying as he leant over the table, "This cylinder is one of the wonders of the world. Just one twist of this cap and down goes the acid on to a little thin disc, and gets to the explosive. Then up she goes!"

"You told us that a dozen times already!" Quinn said in a weary tone.

"Ha!" exclaimed Carey. "Soon I'll be telling it to the whole city, to the whole country! This cylinder is a miracle, man alive! The man who invented it has more brains than all the professors in the world put together."

"I could do with a 'wet' " Lanigan said in a laconic tone.

Carey curled up his lips in a sneer. "You and your drink!" he flung back at Lanigan in a bitter tone. "That's all you ever think of! Don't you realise that to-night we're going to destroy a monument erected to a man who was nothing but a hypocrite in life—and they trying to make a saint of him in death by laying wreaths at the feet of his stone image?"

* * * *

LANIGAN turned his head and spat at the floor. "Blasted idealism!" he said. "What do I care if he was a hypocrite or not! I'm getting ten quid for this night's work—and I'd blow up my own grandmother for that. I tell you I could do with a 'wet,' monument or no monument."

Carey drew back his shoulders as though he were about to spring on these two heavy-jowled assistants of his, who were going to protect him in case the police came on the scene at the wrong moment. He despised them. "Clods!" he said under his breath.

He looked down at his wrist watch. At once his face lost its light of idealism and grew hard and stern. "Come on!" he said, "it's time we were off."

They rose from the table and trooped out of the room and down the tenement stairs. A clock struck midnight as they emerged from the doorway into an alleyway.

They walked down to the main street and set off at a rapid pace towards the heart of the city. The pace, set by Carey, was so fast that at last Quinn said, "Take it easy, Jack! We're not running a race."

"Yes!" Carey ground out. "We're running a race with Time. To-night is a night of nights! When this cylinder explodes it'll be a voice crying out in the wilderness of ignorance!"

"Holy Moses!" exclaimed Lanigan. "Do you hear that fellow!"

They went on again in silence, Carey a little to the front, his head held erect. Their footsteps sounded very loud on the deserted streets.

* * * *

THEY had covered a quarter of a mile when they approached a doorway in which a starving dog was trying to sleep. Their loud footsteps startled it to its feet. It stood, trembling, expecting to be booted out of the doorway.

It was barely a year old, cast adrift by its owner. For days it had been kicked and beaten by grown-ups and street urchins.

But the three men passed on without trying to harm it. At once a feeling of hope, a hunger for kindness, returned to it. Somewhere in its dulled brain the groping thought arose that these men might give it food and shelter.

It began to lope after the men, towards the heart of the city.

Presently it saw them halt on the edge of the wide square in the centre of the city. One of them remained on the near side of the square. A second crossed to the opposite pavement. These two stood like sentinels. The third, Carey, walked to the tall monument in the middle of the square.

At the foot of this newly erected monument stood a stone image of the man whom Carey had called a hypocrite.

* * * *

CAREY mounted the steps of the monument very slowly. The metal cylinder was held tightly in his hand. He was thinking "One twist of the cap . . . and soon . . . soon . . . a great voice of derision will be roaring across this city!"

On the top step he paused to twist the cap that released the acid on to the metal disc separating it from the powerful explosive. Then, almost reverently, he placed it between the feet of the stone image.

For a brief moment he stood upright, staring at the face of the image. Then he turned and leaped down the steps to the square. He ran across the square at a great rate. Lanigan and Quinn ran with him.

The young dog was astonished. It had watched Carey at the monument. Now it saw the men it hoped would be its saviours fleeing like children hurrying home from school.

On an impulse it rushed across the square and up the steps of the monument. It saw the metal cylinder between the feet of the image. It grabbed the cylinder in its teeth and leaped down the steps. With hope bounding in its heart it tore after the fleeing men.

* * * *

A HUNDRED yards away they came to a halt, panting harshly. They stood in a group, almost shoulder to shoulder, waiting for the crash of the explosion. The young dog leaped out of the gloom around them and dropped the cylinder at Carey's feet. It began to bark with joy, eager for appreciation.

Quinn made a wild kick at it. Carey bent forward to see what had clattered at his feet. He stared in astonishment. His blood seemed to freeze suddenly, so that he became powerless to move. He opened his lips to speak, but the shock had paralysed his vocal cords.

Then, before he had returned to his senses, a streak of flame shot up across the bodies of the three men. A second later a terrific explosion rent the air, shattering windows for a radius of half a mile.

When the police came on the scene they found a hole in the street 20 feet in diameter. They found traces of the men, but no trace of the dog or of the little metal cylinder.

A PLAIN MAN'S SERMON

Words That Matter

"IT'S deeds that matter, not words," we say. But are we quite sure that we are right about this?

Our actions are, of course, of the most tremendous importance. What we do matters very much indeed. But the mistake which we can so easily make is to think that therefore our words are of relatively small importance.

Christ was not of this opinion. He taught that a man's words matter more than almost anything about him. "By thy words," He said, "thou shalt be justified; and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." He has, in fact, a very great deal to say about our words, and he comes back again and again to the subject of the importance and significance of men's words.

From one point of view we could scarcely think of anything more fleeting that an uttered word. A word is but a sound made by the mouth, vibrating on the air for less than a second, and then vanishing. It seems so slight a thing. Why then can it matter so much? Let us see what Christ has to say on this subject.

Firstly, then, He says that our words matter so much because it is "out of the abundance of the heart that the mouth speaketh."

★

THOUGHTS OF HEART

SO a man's words are a sample of the thoughts of his heart. Illustrations are plentiful. We all know the man who is sure to tell a bawdy story before you have been talking to him for ten minutes, or the woman who can be relied on to say something spiteful about any neighbour whose name comes up. They are both revealing what is the habitual character of their thoughts.

"A good man," says Christ, out of the goodness stored in his heart, "brings forth good words; and the evil man, out of the badness which is there, brings forth evil words."

And that is why He tells us that "men shall give an account, on the Day of Judgment, of every idle word which they shall speak." We naturally think that "idle" means trivial or unimportant. But not so. Our Lord means the word which is unpremeditated and spontaneous; which slips out unconsciously before the man has thought what he is going to say.

And that is why—so far from being unimportant—the idle word is of the highest importance. Just because it is unstudied, it is really the man's true mind coming casually to the surface, in so doing, revealing inevitably what manner of man he is. This is why the idle word shall condemn a man; because it betrays his real character.

This brings us to the second reason why words can matter so much. It is because words are really thoughts become operative, and gaining thereby a new power to help or to hurt. As long as a man's thoughts remain unuttered in his mind, they do, if they are evil thoughts, harm no one but himself. But, overflowing as words, they acquire a new power for evil and can work astonishing havoc.

They are like venomous creatures which are harmless until they are hatched out; but once hatched, become deadly dangerous. And words are thoughts hatched out, and, if they be evil thoughts, they become what the Psalmist calls "words which may do hurt."

People who revel in the retailing of scandalous gossip are simply producing the overflow of their real minds and showing what their secret thoughts are like. And what hurt they can do! A particularly pitiful and tragic case of an entirely innocent woman, in a West Country town, driven to take her own life as the result of scandalous gossip, will be fresh in all our memories.

BE NOT CONDEMNED

THERE is another class of word which is scarcely less potent to do hurt, and that is the word of deprecation. The Pharisees suggested that Christ's works of healing were accomplished with Satanic assistance. This wilful and deliberate perversion of the truth, intended to harm and belittle and deprecate our Lord, He described as "the sin against the Holy Ghost," which is the sin of wilfully choosing a lie when you know the truth.

It is an illuminating example of the deadly kind of sin which can lie in our words; and it helps us to see why it is true that we shall be called to account, not only for our deeds, but also for our words on the Day of Judgment.

It is an easy thing to do hurt to those of whom, for some reason, we are envious, by slipping in the cheap sneer, shrugging our shoulders and suggesting unworthy motives; but it is, of course, the overflow from ungenerous, jealous and petty minds which is escaping through our lips and showing what manner of men and women we are at heart. Again, it is our words which condemn us.

Lastly, there is the word which is deliberately intended to wound and hurt and give pain. There are words which can hurt more than any blow and which sometimes leave scars which can never be obliterated. There is a tongue "which cutteth like a sharp razor."

Therefore, "set a watch, O Lord, before the door of my lips;" for it may well be that, in the last day, we shall stand condemned for the words which we have spoken far more than for the deeds which we have done.

HISTORY IN SURNAMES.

The O'Briens Have A Royal Origin

SOME smile because Irishmen so frequently trace their names back to kings. True, the connecting links are often obscure; this is not so with the O'Briens. Their surname was fixed probably long before some thousands of English surnames came into use. Indeed, one can imagine an O'Brien making out a plausible claim that he bears the first among surnames.

Until about the tenth century the Irish people were only known by tribal names. Then King Brian Boru ordered, "That the descendants of the heads of tribes and families then in power should take names from them, either from the fathers or grandfathers, and that these names should become hereditary and fixed for ever."

This was done, and the first were the O'Briens—sons of Brian—who took their name from the king himself. This happened a long while before fixed surnames had become general in England.

• • •

Not without reason the Irish complain that this Brian Boru has been made a figure of fun. They say he has been depicted as a sort of giant Cormoran or Eat-'em-alive-oh, and made as mythical as Bluebeard or the giant who was killed by Jack of the Beanstalk.

But Brian was a brave actuality. The serious historians say that he was not only a real man, but he was, what was more important, a real king. Their verdict is that "for once, for the only time as far as its native history is concerned, there was some one at the helm who knew how to rule, and who, moreover, did rule"

Such was the greatest of the Brians who established the surname, and who fell fighting at the Battle of Clontarf. There followed O'Briens who were kings of Thomond. Their pride was in their successes against the English. Every O'Brien knows, or should know, of the glories of his name as sung in the Irish Melodies of Thomas Moore. The direct line from the kings of Thomond has been preserved in the house of the Barons Inchiquin, a title which dates back to the time of Henry VIII., when Mordough O'Bryen gave up his royal title to the King of England, and became Earl of Thomond and Baron Inchiquin.

• • •

The armorial family of O'Briens of Northamptonshire also traced themselves back to these kings of Thomond, to whom we owe the surname itself. Lieut.-Colonel Sir Charles R. M. O'Brien was the son of Sir Terence O'Brien, Governor of Newfoundland, and he himself was Governor of Barbadoes for eight years, after distinguished war and police services in South Africa.

The sixteenth and present Baron Inchiquin is Donough Edward F. O'Brien, who served with the Rifle Brigade during the latter part of the war years, and has been Aide-de-Camp to the Viceroy of India. Sir Timothy C. O'Brien, the third baronet, made a cricket reputation with Oxford and Middlesex.

WHAT CAUSES COLDS?

POLAR explorers do not suffer from colds, because cold, in itself, does not cause colds. They are really due to infection by germs.

Probably most colds are started by infection from someone who is already a victim and sprays germs far and wide by coughing and sneezing.

People who suffer from colds at frequent intervals often have chronic catarrh and an unhealthy condition of the nose and throat, which could be greatly improved by treatment.

An adult who takes an all-round, mixed diet should not lack vitamins, but absence of fresh fruit and vegetables from the diet lowers the resistance to infection.

How Pick-a-back Plane's Dash Ended 370 Miles From Goal

Mercury Breaks One Record, But Is Robbed Of Two

The Mercury in the air. For her Dundee-Cape bid she carried 2,100 gallons of petrol. Borne aloft by her mother ship Maia, she took off from Dundee at one p.m. on Thursday. The two men flying the machine were Captain D. C. T. Bennett, 32-year-old Imperial Airways pilot, who, earlier this year, flew Mercury across the Atlantic in record time; and First Officer Isaac Harvey, a Leicestershire man.

MERCURY, upper component of the Mayo composite aircraft, failed to reach Capetown and failed to beat the Soviet airmen's non-stop flight record of 6,306 miles.

SHE DID, HOWEVER, BREAK THE GERMAN RECORD OF 5,215 MILES FOR THE LONGEST SEAPLANE FLIGHT.

COMPLETED 6,045 MILES.

Faced with fuel shortage, Captain Bennett, her pilot, had to land at 7-25 a.m. British time to-day at the mouth of the Orange River, which is approximately 6,045 miles from Dundee, Mercury's starting point. The journey time was 42 hours 6 minutes.

Had he reached Capetown the new record would have been 6,370 miles.

Had he reached Capetown the new record would have been 6.370 miles.

Captain Bennett wirelessed Walfisch Bay Radio Station, about 700 miles from Capetown, at about 6 a.m. that he might not be able to reach Capetown.

He asked Walfisch Bay for a meteorological report and also signalled "exclamation mark," which was taken to indicate that he regarded the situation as humorous.

Capetown had expected Mercury to arrive during the small hours of the morning.

Flares were lit in Table Bay to guide Captain Bennett, and officials and Press men waited with undisguised impatience as each hour slipped by.

At one period during the night the plane's radio was silent for over an hour and a half.

Mercury crossed the Equator near Makakou on Friday afternoon. She had then covered 4,035 miles in a little over 26 hours.

Mr. D. Munro, the Imperial Airways engineer, who has been in charge of the arrangements for the landing of the Mercury at Capetown, is leaving immediately in a relief plane for the Orange River.

He is carrying a cylinder of compressed air to restart the engines and hopes to arrange for the transport of 400 gallons of petrol from Port Nolloth, which may be a tedious process.

Mr. Munro told Reuter that there was little hope that the Mercury could arrive in Capetown before evening.—Reuter

WHAT MAJOR MAYO SAYS OF IT.

Major R. H. Mayo, designer of the machine, commenting on the flight, said:

"It was a magnificent accomplishment on the part of both members of the crew. Mercury would have got to Capetown if the winds had been favourable.

"Before Mercury left England it had to come down from 7,000 feet to 3,000 because of ice formation. By the time Newhaven was reached the machine had climbed to 5,000 feet—but at the cost of extra fuel.

"We must not be discouraged about it, because the long distance seaplane record has been beaten by about 800 miles and Mercury was deprived of getting to Capetown and establishing an absolute record only by unfavourable weather.. Everything else functioned perfectly.

"Very great care was given to the choice of the day for starting, but the weather conditions actually encountered were not consistent with what was expected.

"We ought to be extremely pleased that we have been able to beat the world's seaplane record by such a large margin."

NOT A FAILURE.

"Although Mercury has not set up a new world's long-distance record, this is a wonderful flight and a wonderful tribute to the men who piloted and navigated her," Major Mayo declared.

I do not think it is quite fair to say that Mercury has failed. She has beaten the seaplane record by a big margin.

What I do object to is that whatever is done in Britain or by British aircraft is always belittled by some people.

"If Germany or some other foreign country does a good flight it is lauded up to the skies."

TROUBLE WITH ADVERSE WINDS.

Mercury had a constant struggle against adverse winds over Africa.

She needed to cover 6,369 miles to break the Soviet airmen's record—which was from Moscow to San Jacinto, California—as it is a rule of the International Auronautical Federation that to set up new figures a flight must be 100 kilometres (63 miles) longer.

The Orange River is about 350 miles north of Capetown.

At one time it was believed that the Mercury had reached Captetown. This was due to a seaplane flying over Table Bay, disappearing, and returning 14 minutes later and landing.

LONDON-LISBON AIR MAIL.

LISBON, Saturday.—The possibility of an air-mail service within six weeks between London and Lisbon and of a passenger service early next year, was mentioned to Reuter by Major MacCrindle, general manager of British Airways, following yesterday's successful test flight by a British Airways liner over the route.

Major MacCrindle said the services were ready to start provided small questions of detail could be settled between the company and the Portuguese Government.

The air-liner left Heston at 8-25 yesterday morning on its non-stop flight and arrived at the Cintra Aerodrome, Lisbon, after a flight lasting 6 hours 29 minutes.—Reuter.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S SUCCESS.

JIBE AT "CONSERVATIVE GANG."

BERLIN, Friday.—Dr. Adolf Halfeld, in an article in this evening's issue of the "Hamburger Fremdenblatt" declares that Mr. Chamberlain's success in the House following the recent debate on foreign policy was "not a victory equal to that of Daladier." His majority of 222 was not to be compared with the 460 majority of the French Prime Minister (wires the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent).

The voting in the English Parliament did not adequately reflect the feeling of the British people, Dr. Halfeld declares. The enormous enthusiasm of the public was shown by the 20,000 letters received by Mr. Chamberlain and by the "spontaneous demonstrations in favour of the rescued peace" with which he had been greeted.

The vote of confidence in the House of Commons extended also to future policy. The result of the vote was not altogether satisfactory. Even this victory of the Conservative Party in the field of foreign policy has not been sufficient to unite behind the Prime Minister that band of M.P.'s who were imbued with irreconcilable enmity towards the authoritarian States. A good 18 men of the Government Party, including "the former Foreign Minister (Eden), Winston Churchill, Eden's former Under Secretary at the Foreign Office (Lord Cranborne), Mr. Duff Cooper (who had resigned), Vyvyan Adams, Harold Nicolson, and Admiral Sir Roger Keyes."

This Conservative gang regarded it as its duty to work with the Opposition against any rapprochement between the axes Berlin-Rome and Paris-London.

The methods of these politicians would do nothing to aid the cause of European peace.

HONORARY SECRETARIES AS HOSTS

The honorary secretaries of the Belfast City Mission, Rev. Dr. Montgomery and Mr. David Irwin, J.P., entertained the Superintendents and Missionaries to tea on Friday evening, in the Hostel Cafe.

The meeting was opened by prayer, by the Rev. Dr. Montgomery. The Chairman, Mr. F. J. Holland, received the Mission district reports, which were most interesting.

Open-air meetings were held in the back-streets, and large numbers attended the week-night Bible classes, and meetings for men only.

Touching reference was made to the death of Mr. T. D. Murray, and a resolution was passed, recording their high appreciation of his long and valuable service to the Mission, which extended over a period of over 43 years.

Messrs. S. Brown, R. Workman, T. J. Kinnear and E. Irwin, all expressed their pleasure in the reports. Mr. J. K. Wallace said the reports were a record of work well done. Rev. Dr. Montgomery addressed the Missionaries. The Chairman thanked the Rev Dr. Montgomery and Mr. David Irwin for their hospitality. Mr. A. Lynn closed the meeting with prayer.

COMBER YOUNG FARMERS' DANCE.

A dance in connection with Comber Young Farmers' Club was held in the Thomas Andrews Junior Memorial Hall, Comber, on Friday evening. The platform was decorated with two miniature corn stacks, a miniature thatched cottage, and a miniature horse and cart with load of corn. A spot dance was won by Mr. S. Robinson and Miss Nelson; a statue dance by Mr. Matthews and Miss Agnew; an illumination dance by Mr. John M'Nish and Miss Helen Thompson. Mr. David Munn, J.P., president of the club, was present. Messrs. [illegible] Caughey and Joseph Stewart were Masters of Ceremony, and Mr. Albert Gray's Dance Band supplied the music.

FACTORY INSTRUCTIONS.

DUTY TO WATCH EVEN OWN FAMILY

BERLIN, Saturday. — The German fear of spies, particularly in industrial concerns, is exemplified in a small booklet called "Spies, Traitors, Saboteurs," which has just been published here. It contains this "confession of faith":

(1) I do my job but do not talk about it to strangers and never let myself be questioned about it by anyone.

(2) I observe with the most painstaking attention all instructions for secrecy given me.

(3) I correct my workmates if they negligently transgress these instructions.

(4) I do not allow myself, even in pretence or with the intention of trapping a spy, to carry on a forbidden and punishable game with a suspected spy or saboteur.

(5) Instead of this I carry on an innocent conversation to test him.

(6) I report every justified suspicion of espionage or sabotage unostentatiously and quickly to my works leader or foreman.

(7) I know that my duty is to report suspcions extends to all, even my friends and members of my family.—Reuter.

CARDINAL CHEERED

BY VIENNA CATHOLICS.

BROWNSHIRTS CAUSE TROUBLE.

A Roman Catholic demonstration on a larger scale than any in Vienna since the German occupation in March, was held last night, when Cardinal Innitzer, Archbishop of Vienna, preached in St. Stephen's Cathedral, primarily to a large number of young people, on the occasion of the Festival of the Rose Wreath, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" correspondent.

The Cardinal went in procession from his Palace to the Cathedral, preceded by hundreds of priests from all parts of Austria, most of whom wore the Hitler Youth badge on their vestments.

Cardinal Innitzer, who supported the German plebiscite on Austria in March, but recently said that his efforts to reach an understanding with the Reich had been unsuccessful, said that many present might not be able to understand the Bishops' action. Catholics must show their faith, however difficult.

There were tremendous demonstrations for the Cardinal when the procession returned from the Cathedral. Men and women fell on their knees on the pavement.

From the terrace of a large cafe opposite, some Brownshirts and others sneered at the Catholic crowds, and some young Catholics started to storm the cafe. There wa a scuffle, and police intervened.

ONE-DISH SUNDAY.

The one-pot Sunday dinner to-morrow is to be inaugurated in Vienna by a festival meal of 1,500 persons in the great square before the City Hall. They will enjoy the German equivalent of the American pork and beans. The Governor of Ostmark, Dr. Seyss Inquart, and the Gau leader of Vienna, Herr Globoenik, and several Ministers and Secretaries of State, will serve the one-pot portion to the guests from army field kitchens, and partake of it themselves. The public may take any seat that is free, and at least 1,500 will be provided. Every consumer will pay 70 pfennigs for his meal.

WITH BOY SCOUTS.

NEXT WEEK'S RELAY RACE.

STRONG PROVINCIAL CHALLENGE.

Scouting is generally regarded as a movement of uniformed officers and boys, and lay membership, a very important aspect, is very often unknown or ignored. Lay members are the backbone of executive work in Scouting, and the local associations in Belfast and other areas of the province, are very fortunate to have really live and sympathetic people, representative of all classes, to help the movement's good work among boys. Belfast, a county area, has three local Associations, North Belfast, South Belfast, and East Belfast, each with an energetic executive committee, ever on the look-out for opportunities of furthering Scouting.

At this time, when these associations are meeting to discuss details of the past year's work and to consider plans for the future, it is only to be expected that some tribute should be paid to these men who as district secretaries, work assiduously behind the scenes, and who shoulder much of the responsibilities, yet are seldom credited with the good work they quietly accomplish. North Belfast officers will gratefully acknowledge the sterling qualities of Mr. J. D. Laird. In East Belfast Major J. M. Henderson has been succeeded as chairman by Capt. W. Cecil Whiting, to whom East Belfast is largely indebted for its present excellent position in Belfast Scouting. Mr. R. Ogilby has the confidence of his fellow members in South district.

SWIMMING BADGES.

Swimming, as a sport, but particularly as a means of furthering bodily fitness, has always played a part in Scouting's programme of physical education. That the Scouts themselves are intensely interested was very clearly demonstrated by the numbers of boys who took part in the Belfast County Swimming Competitions just concluded. Over 300 boys participated during the three evenings, and the light-hearted manner of the swimmers as they displayed their prowess to the examiners showed that, one and all, they were more concerned with the game than with a competitive, individualistic spirit—which, after all, is just the attitude the Ulster Scout officials endeavour to engender in every Scout. It would be an excellent plan, now that swimming has obtained such a hold in many Troops, to enlarge upon the present competition so as to include recognition of holders of the Swimming and Rescuer Badges

Policy, organisation, and rules of the Boy Scouts Association, has been revised for the first time for a few years. Amendments are not many, but there are many additions, and three new badges raise the total of proficiency awards to 71. The new badges are—Backwoodsman, Motor Mechanic, and Rabbit Keeper.

Mr. Charles Dymoke Green, O.B.E., J.P., has retired from the post of General Secretary of the Boy Scouts' Association after nearly 22 years' service. He is succeeded by Mr. Patrick Berryman.

The 1st Gilwell Park Group is composed of Scouters who have been awarded the Wood Badge, and the membership strength of several thousand has spread to far distant Dominions, Colonies, and to many foreign countries. Ulster has a large representation of Scoutmasters and Cubmasters in this exclusive Group, men and women who have sacrificed holidays and time to attend the training courses and camps which are organised year after year to enable Scouters to become adepts at camping, and to realise what underlies the romantic in Scout training. These Ulster members of the Gilwell Troop are to have an afternoon together this month on somewhat similar lines to a previous gathering last year, when over sixty Scouters from different parts of Ulster assembled.

A few weeks ago Ulster Scout Headquarters sent a notice to all Scouters warning them against a pseudo-Rover Scout—a young man who pretends to be stranded and a long way from home, and who asks for money to complete his fare. Scouts should spread the warning amongst their supporters, reminding everyone that Scouts are not allowed to beg, whatever the circumstances. No help should be given and Headquarters should be notified immediately if any trace of this man is discovered.

THE RELAY RACE.

A notice appears in the advertising columns to remind Scoutmasters that the closing date for entries for the East Belfast Association Annual Relay Race is Wednesday, October 12. Capt. W. Cecil Whiting, chairman of East District, will receive entries at 31 Victoria Street, Belfast. Arrangements for the race are now complete. The new course, a triangular one, is on the Belfast Harbour Commissioners' land, and the commencing and finishing point is close to the H.M.S. Caroline. The race will be started by Major Wm. Baird, D.L., J.P., President of East District, and he will also receive the batons at the finish. Teams from Limavady, Portstewart, Magherafelt, and Lisburn and district, are expected to add colour to this increasingly popular event, and it will be no surprise if a provincial team once again captures the premier honours.

NAZIS AND COLONIES

"RESIST CESSION OF TANGANYIKA."

LORD F. SCOTT'S PLEA.

VITAL TO EMPIRE IN AFRICA.

Lord Francis Scott, uncle of the Duchess of Gloucester, who is a member of the Kenya Legislative and Executive Councils, whole-heartedly supports the Tanganyika League in a letter to the Press.

The League, which was founded by Major F. W. Cavendish-Bentinck, is pledged to resist the separation of Tanganyika from the British Empire.

Recalling his visit to London two years ago with the object of trying to make the British public understand the impossibility of even considering handing over Tanganyika to Germany, Lord Francis writes:—

"The situation to-day is far more critical than then, and I appeal to all people of all races in East Africa to band themselves together in adamant opposition to any suggestion of ceding Tanganyika to Hitler.

"The absolute necessity of retaining Tanganyika in the British Empire is too obvious to require explanation. It is a vital factor in the future of the Empire throughout Africa.

LETTERS TO M.P.'S.

"Unfortunately many of our fellow-countrymen in Britain neither realise nor want to realise this fact.

"But what is much more serious is that Mr. Chamberlain, his Majesty's Prime Minister in the United Kingdom, has never been willing to commit himself definitely on this subject. With his present policy of determination to be friends with Hitler at all costs, there is a danger that he might propose the sacrifice of East Africans, however incredible it may seem, unless sufficiently strong opposition is voiced in good time.

"With this fear in my mind, I have already written personally to leading politicians in England, representing all parties, in the hope that a sufficient body of M.P.'s of all parties may join in opposing any such possible proposals.

"This question is just as vital to Asians and Africans as Europeans, and I trust that resolutions will be passed by their representative bodies. We cannot possibly acquiesce in millions of natives being used as mere pawns in a political wangle."

"NO REASON FOR SURRENDER."

The silence of the South African Press regarding South-West Africa has at last been broken. A leading article in the "Cape Times" denies that there is any reason why the Union should surrender the territory, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" Capetown correspondent.

This comment follows an interview with Dr. E. MacMillan, of Pretoria, a former Moderator of the Presbyterian Church of South Africa and a prominent public figure, who has just returned from a visit to Germany. Dr. MacMillan urged the Union to surrender its mandate over South-West Africa, saying it would be "in the interests of world peace."

The "Cape Times" asks—"Why should South Africa voluntarily hand over territory on her borders from which an aggressive State could, if so inclined, subject every important city in Southern South Africa to the perils of air bombardment?

"Why should South Africa make a concession which would compel the immediate establishment of military, air and naval precautions on a large and expensive scale? Why should South Africa help to establish on her borders a political regime wholly in conflict with our democratic system?"

SPAIN SUPPORTS PORTUGAL.

CRITICISM OF GREAT POWERS.

BARCELONA, Friday.—Under the heading "Portugal's Colonies—The Government Cannot Remain Indifferent," "La Vanguardia" to-day states:—

"The Third Reich is preparing new demands. The settlement of colonial differences is being urged. At Godesberg and Munich the question has already been broached.

"In keeping with their traditional policy in face of German demands, the Great Powers are preparing to meet these demands in their usual way—that is, in order to deflect them from themselves they are beginning to talk of the colonies of the weaker Powers—Holland, Belgium, and Portugal, especially the last.

"Our neighbour is naturally perturbed about this. Its position as satellite of Great Britain and the fact that in its Peninsular policy it coincides with Germany are no guarantees. The case of Czecho-Slovakia has shattered a number of illusions.

"We affirm that we are not indifferent to this problem.

"Spain has shown herself capable of forgetting dislikes and divergencies. Spain is united. Although Portugal at the present time is following a policy which is opposed to Republican Spain that will not prevent us from rising against a new injustice planned by the arbiters of Europe."—Spanish Press Agency to Central News.

POOLING HIS POOL MONEY.

So great has been the response to the Lord Mayor of London's appeal on behalf of the fund for refugees in Czecho-Slovakia that the staff of workers dealing with the correspondence has had to be trebled.

One man who sent half-a-crown today wrote: "I am so much in sympathy with the Czechs that I am offering my usual football pool allowance."

King's Message to Legionnaires.

The King to-day sent the following message to the British Legion Volunteer Police Force at Olympia:

"I send my best wishes to those members of the British Legion who are leaving for the plebiscite areas of Czecho-Slovakia and trust that they will successfully discharge the difficult duties which they have undertaken voluntarily and with such commendable public spirit."

The Prime Minister has sent the Legion a cheque for £100 which he received from five Swiss citizens, another for £30 from a Dutchman, and a ten shilling note from a German ex-Serviceman who is living in Switzerland.

Lady Edward Spencer Churchill, chairman of the Women's Section of the Legion, said that the women intended to keep the men supplied with cigarettes.

She had asked a tobacco firm for 60,000 cigarettes "on tick" but there was "no tick" about it. The firm gave them all.

The volunteer force are under orders to be ready to sail on Monday for Czecho-Slovakia.

Prague's Peace Gesture—Amnesty For All Political Prisoners

Vigorous Czech Press Protest At Latest Berlin Decisions

PRAGUE, Saturday.—The Czecho-Slovak Cabinet has decided on an amnesty for all Sudeten, Hungarian and Polish political prisoners.

THIS IS ONE OF THE FIRST STEPS OF THE NEW PRAGUE GOVERNMENT AS CZECHO-SLOVAKIA SETTLES DOWN TO ITS NEW CONDITIONS.

ATTACK ON BRITAIN.

A vigorous protest against the latest decisions of the International Boundary Commission at Berlin relating to the determination of the frontier of the Fifth Zone is published in the Czech Press this morning.

The "Ceske Slovo," the mouthpiece of ex-President Benes, writes:

"The latest decisions are worse than the Godesberg plan. We demand the immediate calling of Parliament and a protest to France and Britain.

"Now we can understand why France and Britain cast a veil over the details of the Munich Pact at the time of its conclusion. We were to be fed piecemeal to the aggressor."

The four newly-appointed Slovak Ministers who are taking over the government of Slovakia pending the setting-up of an autonomous regime have taken their oath of office.

Mgr. Tiso, the Slovak autonomist leader, and M. Chvalkovsky, the new Foreign Minister, attended last night's meeting of the Cabinet for the first time.

M. Chvalkovsky went to Berlin to-day for direct negotiations between the Czecho-Slovak and German Governments regarding the final line of the frontier.

TOWNS CUT IN HALF.

This will have to be rectified because, according to the present rough drafts, it cuts several towns and hamlets in half, especially in Southern Moravia.

The new line would, it is remarked here (says Reuter), almost seem to have aimed at interfering as much as possible with the Czecho-Slovak main railway lines of communication.

Thus to proceed from Pardubice to Brno the line three times crosses tongues of German territory. Similarly the railway from the same place to Kosice, in Sub-Carpathian Russia, crosses German territory five times and Polish territory once.

The consequence, it is pointed out, is that the Germans will have it in their power to force the Czechs into a railway agreement.

The negotiations with the Hungarians which begin at Komarom to-morrow, will probably end in transfer by agreement and may result in an important transfer of population as it is estimated that there are well over 200,000 Czechs on Hungarian soil.

There will in all probability be a plebiscite in the region claimed by the Poles in the neighbourhood of Maehrisch-Ostrau. This will be discussed with the Polish Commission expected in Prague next week.

PLEBISCITE PLAN MAY BE DROPPED

It is now believed in well-informed quarters that Germany and Czecho-Slovakia may be able to reach an agreement about the delimitation of the final frontier line without recourse to plebiscites in the doubtful areas.

In this case the services of the British Legion to maintain law and order would not be required.

With minor alterations, the frontier would then probably approximate to the limits already fixed for German military occupation. Provision would still have to be made for an exchange of populations.

The advantages of a frontier line reached by agreement are obvious. Tempers which are now beginning to cool would once more be excited by plebiscites, and there would be a continual danger of clashes between Sudeten Germans and Czechs in the areas concerned.

The International Commission will not begin its formal consideration of the plebiscite problem until next week. It is hoped by then the Germans and Czechs may have reached an agreement in principle, which can be fully worked out under the auspices of the Commission.

There is a continual coming and going of members of the new Czecho-Slovak Government between Prague and Berlin. Dr. Deierabend, the Czech Minister of Agriculture, and Dr. Preiss, the chairman of the Zivnostenka Bank, returned to Prague yesterday after talks with German Government officials.

Representatives of the German and Czech Transport Ministries yesterday discussed the resumption of normal railway traffic across the Sudeten areas.

MUNICH AND 1914.

The "Montreal Star," commenting on the British Commons vote of confidence in Mr. Chamberlain's policy, says:—

"If there had been a Chamberlain in 1914 the Western democracies would have permitted the Austro-Hungarian Empire to dismember Servia as punishment for the murder of the Austrian heir and his wife. We should have had no Hitler, no national persecution of the Jews, no Berserk Nordic fanatics setting out to terrorise the world, no Mussolini to strut forth and reconstitute the Roman Empire.

"Instead, we had the war, we went through hell for four years, and what did we get? We got a college professor from the United States who saddled Europe with the beautiful theory of self-determination for minorities without providing the force necessary to keep majorities for treading them underfoot. We got Hitler, Mussolini, Stalin. We got Europe more bent on war than ever before."

ECONOMIC POSITION WON'T BE SO DESPERATE AS WAS FEARED

PRAGUE, Saturday.—While Czecho-Slovakia will suffer severe economic loss by the cession to Germany and Poland of important industrial areas, the general position will not be as desperate as was at first believed (says a Reuter despatch).

One or two important industries will be almost entirely lost or greatly diminished. Against this, however, must be set the fact that the new Czecho-Slovakia will also be rid of certain export industries in the frontier districts which were a constant burden to the State owing to their need of subsidies.

Similarly the Spas, Carlsbad, Marienbad, and others which go to Germany had in recent years been a source of loss rather than of profit.

The biggest single loss to Czecho-Slovakia is that of the brown coal mines. Hitherto a total of 16,000,000 tons a year has been produced. Almost the whole of this goes to Germany, leaving only 2,000,000 tons within the new Republic.

On the other hand, Germany already has an export surplus of coal, and it may be safely assumed that the Bohemian brown coal will continue to go to its old markets in Czecho-Slovakia.

Czecho-Slovakia black coal, of which some 13,000,000 tons a year have been mined is obtained mostly round Ostrava, part of the region which will go to Poland.

THE CESSIONS TO POLAND.

The cessions to Poland will also affect the metal industry, but the losses here should not be excessive. On the basis of the 1930 figures it is estimated that 61 per cent. of the works then recorded and 79 per cent. of the workers will remain in the new State.

There is a considerable loss in the famous Bohemian glass industry, only 37 per cent. of glass works remaining in Czecho-Slovakia.

In textiles the Republic retains 51 per cent. of the mills and 47 per cent. of the workers.

Almost the whole of the porcelain industry in which Czecho-Slovakia was one of the world's leading producers goes to Germany.

Leather goods are not greatly affected, 71 per cent of the factories and 74 per cent. of the workers remaining.

The big shoe industry of Czecho-Slovakia is entirely unaffected.

EFFECT ON BRITISH COAL INDUSTRY

The surrender of Czecho-Slovakian coal mines to Germany and Poland is not likely seriously to affect the British coal industry, states the "Daily Telegraph and Morning Post" industrial correspondent.

The question was being keenly discussed in British mining circles yesterday, as a result of a statement issued by Mr. Will Lawther, vice-president of the Mineworkers' Federation of Great Britain. Mr. Lawther said, "It stands out crystal clear that the coal producing regions of Czecho-Slovakia will be a further lever against the export coal-producing areas of Britain."

The other side of the case was put to me by a mining authority. He said: "The surrender of the Czecho-Slovakian mines will have little or no effect on the international coal situation. The fact is that the produce of the Czecho-Slovakian mines has been used for a long time by the industries on the spot and will continue to be so used.

"Imports of coal from Britain to Czecho-Slovakia and Czech exports to Britain do not exist."

German Officer and Impregnable Czech Fortifications

I have just returned, says a Press Association correspondent, from a visit to the Czech fortifications at Spornhau in zone four of Sudetenland, which are now closely guarded by German troops.

Accompanied by a major of the German Army, I descended into the underground forts and examined the elaborate system of defence prepared by the Czechs against a possible armed invasion of their territory.

The major, a gunnery instructor at Potsdam Military Academy, who led 49 storming parties during the Great War, explained to me the advantages and disadvantages as they appeared to him of Czecho-Slovakia's first and second line of defence.

Under French military supervision, he said, the Czechs first constructed their famous Schoeber Line in a wide semi-circle from Grulich in the west to Troppau in the East. When this was completed they constructed another line nearer the German frontier.

It is this last line and the western portion of the Schoeber Line which the German Army have just occupied.

Many of the forts are still only partly finished and the Czechs were working feverishly to finish them right up to the moment the Munich Agreement was signed.

The Major described several small forts as "veritable coffins."

"I would rather storm one of these with a dozen men," he said, "than defend it."

He was, however, full of admiration for the large forts on the Schoeber Line.

Fir trees planted in the thick layer of earth which covers the forts, and wire nets covered with brushwood hanging over the facades, presented a perfect and natural camouflage.

In front of each gun emplacement there is a ten feet deep concrete pit to prevent an enemy from storming the guns.

"Aided by constant pounding of heavy artillery and supported by tanks, even the German Army," the Major smilingly asserted, "would find this fort almost impregnable."

FINANCIAL REVIEW

PRACTICAL TEST OF BUSINESS

MANY PRICES LOWERED

LONDON, Friday Night.—After last week's huge rebound in stock and share values generally, it was only to be expected that in the past few days there would be an adjustment to less arbitrary prices than those which were quoted following the Munich Agreement news.

Quotations having since been subjected to the practical test of business, it was found that the levels to which they had been hoisted were out of line in many cases, and especially so in the home Industrial market in view of the disturbance to normal business caused by the "war scare" and the continued interruption to export trade referred to in the Dunlop Co.'s circular to shareholders as one of the main reasons explaining the fact that that company's profits are now running much below last year's level.

THE NEW ACCOUNT AHEAD.

The next account opens on Monday, and a good many professionals are expecting a broadening of activity. The public may be slow in again entering the markets, but they seldom refuse to follow a lead. There is no cloud on the horizon so far as one can see, yet the public is none too confident that storms will not arise and all too suddenly.

The American market may prove popular for a few weeks in view of the improving trading outlook, while among shares on this side gold, base metal, oil, rubber, and commodity shares generally appear likely to improve. Industrial shares outside Aircraft and Armaments may be affected by the lower dividends which may be declared.

CHEAP GOVERNMENT BORROWING.

Last week the banks and financial institutions were not inclined to lend money on Treasury bills, and the Government had to pay 25 per cent. for accommodation. Lenders were much more willing to-day, for tenders for £50,000,000 were received at the Bank of England. The average rate is 14s 4½d, as compared with 25s 1d a week ago. The monetary position has quickly recovered, and it may be accepted that the Government will not depart from its cheap money policy. After all, it is helping itself by keeping money at a low level, and the misfortune is that industry is not taking advantage of it, as business does not justify expansion.

Burmah Oil 92s 6d—7½d.
Anglo-Iranian 5¼—5-32.

With a fair number of exceptions, due mainly to the strengthening of the demand for aeroplane issues, the majority of Industrial share movements have been downwards. Noticeable, of course, in this connection is the decline in Dunlops, resulting from the issue of that company's "warning" circular.

Cable and Wireless stocks have recovered somewhat, as it is recognised that, as in the case of the railway companies, the undertakings traffics has been swelled by the exciting happenings of the past few weeks.

British Government stocks, though presenting a firm appearance at the moment, have declined by approximately a point.

Home Railway stocks, too, have lost ground, as it is recognised that the relative improvement in the traffic returns for the past week (and showing an aggregate decrease of no more than £31,000) can only be regarded as a flash in the pan. Transport "C" was marked down sharply on the cut in the dividend.

There have been heavy reactions in the quotations for Central European bonds, but Japanese issues have staged a good recovery.

ENCOURAGING SIGN.

Probably the most encouraging development during the past week has been the improvement in Transatlantic stocks following the further evidences of recovery in the trade of the U.S.A., which occurrence has now been given official recognition by President Roosevelt. In this connection, "The Iron Age" states that steel mill activity for the current week is at 69 per cent. of capacity, as compared with 47 per cent. last week.

MINING.

There has been a fair amount of activity in the Mining share market, although business has been restricted to some extent owing to the fact that this is the last week of an unpopular three week account. The Johannesburg Stock Exchange was closed on Monday and on Wednesday, the latter being the Jewish Day of Atonement, while the former was a public holiday.

The weakness of sterling in relation to the dollar earlier in the week led to a sharp improvement in the Gold quotation to 145s 3½d per fine oz. on the 4th. The price, however, has since receded to 145s, as compared with 144s 1d on Friday last on the recovery in sterling.

Several of the dividend payers in the Kaffir Circus have attracted attention from Paris, on fears of a devaluation in the franc, although the demand slackened on more reassuring news regarding the currency.

West Witwatersrand have been supported in the belief that the flotation of the next subsidiary to work the area—Driefontein No. 118—immediately to the east of Blyvooritzicht is only awaiting a favourable market opportunity. The new issue proposals have had little effect on Simmer and Jack.

West Africans, after dwindling through lack of demand earlier in the week, have since been favoured and show little change on the week.

COPPERS' PROGRESS.

Rhodesian copper shares display firmness, stimulated by a rise in the price of American Copper of ¼ to 10¼ cents. per lb.

Rhokana have made headway following the final dividend of 37½ per cent., making 62½ per cent. for the year (same) which was up to market estimates, although in some quarters it was thought a more conservative policy would possibly have been adopted.

The share market has generally responded to the advance in base metals. Copper has advanced to £44 3s 9d and Tin to £204 2s 6d per ton.

RUBBERS AND OILS.

Rubber shares are quietly firmer, stimulated by the improvement in the commodity to 8 13-32d per lb.

Oil shares have experienced a quiet session and show some irregularity.

THE VENTERSPOST POSITION.

The report of the Venterspost Gold Mining Company, Ltd., for the year to June 30 shows that up to that time £2,755,902 has been spent on the acquisition, development, and equipment of the property, which one may recall is situated in the new western field of the Rand. In May last £1,400,000 10s shares were issued at £1 10s, bringing in further working capital of £2,100,000. At the date of the balance sheet there was £1,806,000 left, which will be utilised to further open up the property and to erect a reduction plant having a capacity of 100,000 tons per month.

The disclosure during the past year in the No. 1 Shaft has been most encouraging, and seven levels are in course of being prepared for stoping. At No. 2 shaft only the No. 7 level has been opened up, and of 1,170 feet sampled 76.1 per cent. is payable. Sometime since we mentioned that no surprise need be felt if Ventersposts experienced a substantial rise. There is no doubt that the mine is much beyond the speculative stage, and it may eventually vie with the best mines on the Central Rand.

A HOPEFUL OUTLOOK.

The Sentinel Waggon Works (1936), Ltd., is a reconstruction of a company of the same name, manufacturing steam road waggons, tractors, trailers, etc. During the first two years of its existence it has had an uphill task, but the experience of last year was much more favourable than the first period. The net profit for the year to July 31 is £23,529, against a net loss of £13,023 for the previous fourteen months. The directors are able not only to extinguish the debit balance but to write off the whole of the preliminary expenses and place to General Reserve £5,370, leaving £2,003 to be carried forward.

Mr. S. E. Alley, the chairman, in his speech to be delivered at the forthcoming meeting, will state that apart from unforeseen crisis the diretcors consider it likely that the profits for the current year should not be less than those for the past year. If that estimate proves correct, as he expects, there will be sufficient to bring the Preference dividends up to date with a margin for the Ordinary shares.

MUREX PROFITS TAKE ANOTHER JUMP.

Murex profits have taken another jump in the year ended June 30, 1938. In fact the figures would show still better had it not been for the marked decline in the general demand for the types of products made by the company during the latter part of the period under the influences of the less settled economic and industrial conditions. The trading profit of £346,657 compares with £303,501 for 1936-1937, and the balance of profit of £422,221 with £370,422. The available total, including £81,263 brought in, is £503,488. The allocations include £53,074 against £12,174 to obsolescence reserve, and £111,450 against £78,000 to taxation reserve. The final dividend on Ordinary shares is 10 per cent. and cash bonus 2½ per cent., making again 20 per cent. for the year, leaving £90,464 to go forward.

BEECHAM-ENO DEAL TERMS.

The terms of the deal by which Beechams Pills, Ltd., proposes to acquire the whole of the issued Ordinary share capital of Eno Proprietaries, Ltd., were announced on Friday evening and provides for the exchange for every eight Eno Ordinary 5s shares for five Beechams Pills Deferred 2s 6d shares—the latter to rank for all dividends after September 6, 1938.

ENGLISH SEWING COTTON.

An interim dividend of 2½ per cent. has been declared for the current year on the Ordinary stock of the English Sewing Cotton Company Interim dividends have been maintained at this rate for a considerable time, and the total distribution for each of the last few years has been 10 per cent. The company has a large interest in the American Thread Company and that textile trade in the United States now appears to be making a good recovery.

KEYSTONE KNITTING MILLS.

The manufacture of silk hosiery appears to leave little margin of profit, at least to firms which conduct no other business, and its recorded financial results are usually disappointing. Keystone Knitting Mills (1928, Ltd., of Elstree, Herts, again shows no progress towards a resumption of dividend payments. Its net profit in the year ended June 30 is now announced as £1,462, against £1,575 in the previous year and £5,516 in 1935-6, and after writing £1,000 (as compared with £2,000 a year ago) off preliminary expenses, leaving a balance of £3,000, the carry-forward will be increased from £340 to £802. The dividend on the 8 per cent. Preferred Ordinary shares is in arrear as from August 1, 1929, and no payment has yet been made on the Deferred Ordinary shares.

L.T.B.'s FUTURE.

The future of the London Passenger Transport Board, in view of the risk of receivership, is now the subject of animated discussion. Mr. John F. Heaton, chairman and managing director of Thomas Tilling, Ltd., who are amongst the largest holders of the "C" stock, states that the matter is under careful consideration, but he leans to the view that an expansion in gross revenue of apprximately 2½ per cent., or an average increase in fares at the rate of 6d in the £1, would suffice to produce the necessary extra revenue to pay the standard rate of interest on this stock, and at the same time leave a substantial margin for other purposes. The Stock Exchange view, as voiced by a leading firm of dealers in the Home Railway market, is that of a compromise, including the substitution of a new standard of 4 per cent. for the present 5½ per cent. to 6 per cent. The experience of the Port of London Authority is cited in this connection.

SOCIALISM IN MEXICO.

The New York Trust Company, in its publication, "The Index," expresses the opinion that expropriation of foreign-owned oil fields by the Mexican Government, in accordance with its Socialistic policy, has so far failed to realise the benefits which the Government and its supporters confidently counted upon. Instead the direct results have been decrease in production, more unemployment, lower wages, reduced social benefits, loss of markets, shortage of trained technicians and loss of an important source of public revenue. Socialisation of railways, it is stated, has been followed by the recent substantial raising of freight rates, with new burdens for Mexican agriculture and industry. Governmental cash resources, as a result of the expenditures incidental to the expropriation of the large estates, have been exhausted, forcing borrowing from the Central Bank. This in turn has diverted credits from productive enterprise. "The Index," therefore, suggests so contrary have the efforts of expropriation proved that the Government is likely to hesitate before extending the operation to foreign-owned mines, which are the only remaining important source of revenue and foreign exchange.

PROPOSED DEAL NOW OFF.

Callenders Cable and Construction Co., Ltd., state that owing to the recent crisis and the consequent unsettled condition of world trade and finance, the directors of that company and of Messrs. Crompton, Parkinson, Ltd. have mutually agreed that it would be inadvisable to proceed with the negotiations for a closer working of the interests of the two companies. These negotiations, which it is stated have been carried on with that friendly spirit which has always characterised the dealings between the two companies, are therefore now closed.

QUEEN'S IN MANCHESTER.

SEVENTH ANNUAL DINNER OF CLUB

The seventh annual dinner of the Manchester and District Queen's University Club was held in Manchester on Thursday, when Dr. Robert Marshall, of Belfast, was the principal guest. M'Bride, Fothergill Glasgow, Bob Mitchell, Willie Cousins, John Knox, Ernie Milligan, etc.

After the loyal toast had been duly honoured the toast of "Queen's University" was proposed by Ernie Milligan, who told of early days in Queen's, when football matches were played in the grounds, and how he had witnessed many strenuous efforts by the Queen's team to get the better of the bearded boys from Donaghadee.

Dr. Marshall replied on behalf of the university, and pressed the point that Queensmen in England had not responded to the recent appeal as well as they might have done.

The president, Dr. Hugh Morris, proposed the toast of "The Guests." Dr. W. J. S. Reid, a Manchester physician, replied.

An impromptu entertainment, in which Barney Brennan and Fothergill Glasgow played prominent parts, brought a happy evening to a close.

SPEED-UP IN AIR DEFENCE.

SIR K. WOOD'S SCHEMES

FOR BRITISH PROVINCIAL CENTRES

Sir Kingsley Wood, Minister for Air, declared at Cambridge to-day that the building up of our defences must go on without pause or halt. Much had been done, but much remained to be done and we were spending great sums of money for the vital purpose—an insurance premium for our safety and security.

He announced a new £1,000,000 aircraft factory at Gloucester, £500,000 extensions to an aircraft factory at Stockport, and balloon barrage training depots for Birmingham, Bristol, Manchester, Liverpool, Hull, Newcastle, Plymouth, Southampton, Glasgow, and Cardiff.

Sir Kingsley said that so great had been the rush of applicants to join the Civil Air Guard (over 30,000) that the club lists would have to be closed temporarily.

He pointed out that we no longer had ...d security as an island nation; we were bridged to the Continent by machines capable of destruction and death which were little fettered by distance and geography.

It was hoped that as the result of the crisis the nations would now work unceasingly together for the elimination of the causes of hostility and for the promotion of co-operation and goodwill, but until that objective was obtained we must proceed without pause or halt with our defence.

GIRL WHO "LOOKED SO COCKY."

DENIES SHE DROVE CAR

OR SMOKED CIGARETTE.

Is it unusual for girls smoking cigarettes to drive cars in 1938?" asked counsel in a case at Bradford Quarter Sessions yesterday.

"No," replied witness, "but she looked so cocky sitting there like that."

The witness was referring to a woman who had denied that she drove a car concerned in an accident or that she smoked a cigarette at the time.

An appeal against a conviction for dangerous driving passed by the Stipendiary Magistrate on William Lumb (45), constable in the Bradford City Police, was allowed, with costs, by the Recorder, Mr. Frank Beverley.

On his conviction by the magistrate, Lumb was fined £6. It was alleged that his car came into collision with another car in Lilycroft Road, and his car was overturned.

Donald J. Fearns, of Toller Lane, Bradford, said that he was driving the car with a woman as passenger. Fearns denied that the woman was driving the car and that at the same time she was smoking a cigarette.

Miss Olive Ann Batley, typist, of Duemy Drive, Bradford, said that she was in the car, but denied she was driving it or smoking a cigarette.

Mrs. Gladys Crossland, of Whetley Street, Bradford, one of the witnesses for appellant, said that the car was being driven fast by a woman who was smoking. A man was sitting beside the woman.

The Recorder, allowing the appeal, said that he did not believe that Fearns was driving the car.

ORANGEFIELD CHURCH.

COLOURS FOR GUIDES AND SCOUTS

A presentation of colours to the 11th Company Girl Guides and the 58th Group of Scouts and Cubs took place in the Orangefield Presbyterian Hall, Belfast, on Friday.

After tea the whole company paraded. The Guides and Brownies, under Capt. Miss Barr, were inspected by Commissioner Miss M'Kegney, and the Scouts and Cubs, under G.S.M. Murray, by Mr. J. H. Narritt (East Belfast District Commissioner).

The flags were handed over by Mr. Patterson to the Guides, on behalf of Mr. S. Conn, to the Scouts, on behalf of Mr. T. C. Binnington, and that to the Cubs on behalf of Mr. W. S. Keown. A flag was also promised for the Brownie pack, but under the rules Brownies do not carry colours. G.S.M. Murray, in accepting, said they were very greatly indebted to these friends for their kindness in presenting the colours.

Commissioner Miss M'Kegney, Commissioner Mr. Narritt and Assistant District Commissioner R. R. Clarke gave addresses and added their thanks for the gifts. Cheers were given to the donors by all present.

The colours were then handed to the chaplain of the groups, Rev. W. E. Kirkpatrick, who offered up a prayer.

The remainder of the evening was taken up by a programme given by the various units:—Maze marching by the Guides; piano solos by Guides Mawhinney and Hunter; recitations by Brownies Dean and Anderson; solo by Guide Russell; recitation by Cub Smith. A camp fire brought a very successful evening to a close.

Although only a year in operation the various organisations are now going ahead. The Guides have had to make a fourth patrol. The Brownies, under Miss Lynton, number 22. The Scouts, under Mr. Murray, are very keen, and will soon require to form a third patrol. The Cubs, under Mr. Patterson, have four sixes, and in this short time have already started to collect badges.

COMMITTED ELEVEN MURDERS.

ARAB PAYS THE PENALTY.

When he mounted the gallows Salah insisted on making a long speech to the small group of prison officials and doctors.—Reuter.

MINISTER OF LABOUR AT LARNE.

RELIEF WORK REFERENCE.

SCHEMES OF PUBLIC UTILITY.

The Minister of Labour, Rt. Hon. John F. Gordon, and the Parliamentary Secretary, Mr. Wm. Grant, visiting a meeting of the Larne Employment Committee on Friday evening, received the congratulations of the committee on their appointments.

The chairman of the committee, Mr. John Burton, said nowhere was the news received with greater satisfaction and gratification than in Larne, and especially in that committee.

The Minister of Labour said he appreciated more that he could say their warm and generous congratulations. He wanted to make his appointment a success and to have associated with him local employment committees throughout the country. He wanted the great voluntary public services that committees had rendered to the Ministry of Labour in the past to continue and would keep in close personal contact with them.

Mr. Gordon dealt with the three Bills he introduced in the House of Commons during the week, and in reference to relief works said if the committees could get local authorities to embark on relief schemes of public utility, and such were approved by the Department, the Ministry, by a change that came into being a short time ago, were prepared to give 85 per cent. of the wages for men employed on the particular works.

Mr. Grant said that for the first time two men who came from the ranks of the working people were occupying prominent positions in the Ministry of Labour. They had come through a very hard school. They had learned by experience the wants of the people and would try to do all possible to make the lot of the people with whom they were associated better and brighter. That was the only promise he would make. That did not suggest that it was going to be a one-sided Ministry. They were going to appreciate everybody's point of view and they were going to make a special effort to help what some people called "the underdog."

Mr. R. R. Bowman, assistant permanent secretary of the Ministry of Labour, spoke of the Government's physical training scheme for unemployed at Derry and Belfast. If there were enough men in Larne to justify a class, they hoped to give similar facilities there. They had that in view for other towns.

Captain A. Ferris, chairman, Larne U.D.C., expressed the view that local authorities did not do enough in the way of taking advantage of the Government's offer of 85 per cent. for relief schemes.

A report by Mr. R. H. Morrison, manager of the local exchange and secretary of the committee, was that at September 30 the numbers of wholly unemployed were 898 and temporary stoppages accounted for 302. The combined total 1,200, compared with September, 1937, was an increase of 277.

ACCOUNTANTS' COUNCIL.

MEETING IN DUBLIN.

A meeting of the Council of the Society of Incorporated Accountants in Ireland was held at 34 Dame Street, Dublin, the president, Mr. R. L. Reid (Dublin) being in the chair. The results of the examinations held at Dublin and Belfast centres in May, 1938, were reported. Applications for permission to sit for the forthcoming examinations to be held in November next were considered.

The hon. treasurer presented his account of receipts and payments since last meeting and same was approved.

It was announced that the Belfast and District Society of Incorporated Accountants would hold their dinner in the Grand Central Hotel, Belfast, on Monday, November 14.

WOMEN AND WINE.

"Thru countless years men have congregated in their clubs and pubs and what to drink and when is the tangible result," said Miss B. K. Coutts, who today was the first woman to deliver an address at the Hotels and Restaurants Association conference at Southport.

"There are wine waiters who adopt the negative approach, and suffering from inferiority complex women murmur 'Water.'"

Tipping was another matter which women without pockets for small change preferred to leave to men.

"We all want pockets—but fashion is relentless," said Miss Coutts.

RACING IN AUSTRALIA.

NUFFIELD WINS CAULFIELD GUINEAS.

MELBOURNE, Saturday.—Mr. C. B. Kellow's Nuffield abundantly justified the experts' claim that he was the best two-year-old of the last Australian racing season when he won the Caulfield Guineas here to-day. A brilliant career on the Australian Turf is predicted.

Nuffield combines the blood of some of the best English racing stock, for he has two strains of Carbine in alliance with Bend Or and Hampton. His dam, Belle Gallante, is by Cyklon (son of Spearmint) from Isa by The Welkin from Teppo b Ladas. Ladas won the English Two Thousand Guineas and the Derby.—Foreign Special.

LOSS TO ENGLISH TURF.

SIR W. COOKE GIVES UP RACING.

Sir William Cooke has decided to give up racing, and all his yearlings will come up for sale at Newmarket next week. Some years ago he sold all his racehorses, but later came back to the Turf. He has had many trainers during his racing career. His horses are at present trained by G. Barling at Newmarket.

Hornet's Beauty is the best horse which Sir William has owned. He was one of the greatest sprinters of his age. His record included winning three races at Ascot in 1911. He also won the King George Stakes at Goodwood and the Portland Plate at Doncaster.

SENOR SENT TO THE STUD.

Senor, winner this season of the Queen's Prize at Kempton Park and the Ormonde Stakes at Chester, has been sent to the stud of his owner, Mr. W. Barnett. He is a bay horse four years old by Trigo out of Wish Maiden.

SURPRISE SEQUEL TO BIG FIGHT.

SCOTS PROMOTER CHARGED.

GLASGOW COURT HEARING.

George Dingley, the well-known Scots boxing promoter, appeared at Glasgow Central Police Court to-day, and was remitted to the Sheriff Court on a charge of fraud. The proceedings lasted only a few minutes.

Procurator J. S. Langmuir stated that the accused had been apprehended on a Sheriff's warrant on a charge of fraud. He asked that Dingley be remitted to the Sheriff Court.

The magistrate agreed to this request.

It is understood (writes our Glasgow correspondent) that the amount involved is over £600, and it arises out of the Benny Lynch-Jackie Jurich fight on June 29 at St. Mirren's Football Park, Paisley.

Detective-Sergeant MacCalman and Detective-Constable Kelso carried the arrest out on Friday night. They visited offices at 21 Hope Street, Glasgow, and apprehended the accused. There the arrest was carried through quietly, and although Hope Street was well crowded at the time the general public were unaware that the well-known Scots boxing promoter had just been arrested.
